One Step At A Time

Standing on the edge of the grassy bank, the boy contemplates his situation. Which path of stepping stones should he take to get across the dark blue-green water? Should he step onto the seemingly easy path which entails large stones that hover close together in the still waters, tempting a crossing? Or should he embark on the course that threatens a fall? Remotely scattered, the undersized rocks become more slick with each passing moment as the water flows over them.

The stepping stones of life vary in size and shape. The jump from stone to stone can be a baby step or a huge leap. Sometimes you fall, sometimes you teeter on the edge, and sometimes you land safely. This is what life is about. Each decision marks a new stepping stone. Bad choices will be made at times, but there is always a stone nearby to set you back on the right path. Other times, a clear path is laid out before you. Each phase in life is different.

As we step into the millennium and another year, different stepping stones will be presented for various people. One thing is for sure, though, our intended destination is in the same vicinity. Join The Legend in marking our path through the year on our own Stepping Stones.

FRONT & CENTER

Just Relaxing. Standing in line to get dance tickets, Tony Morin and Jeni Boyce display spirit with their tie-dye shirts. Hippy Day was the day to bring back the trends of the past.

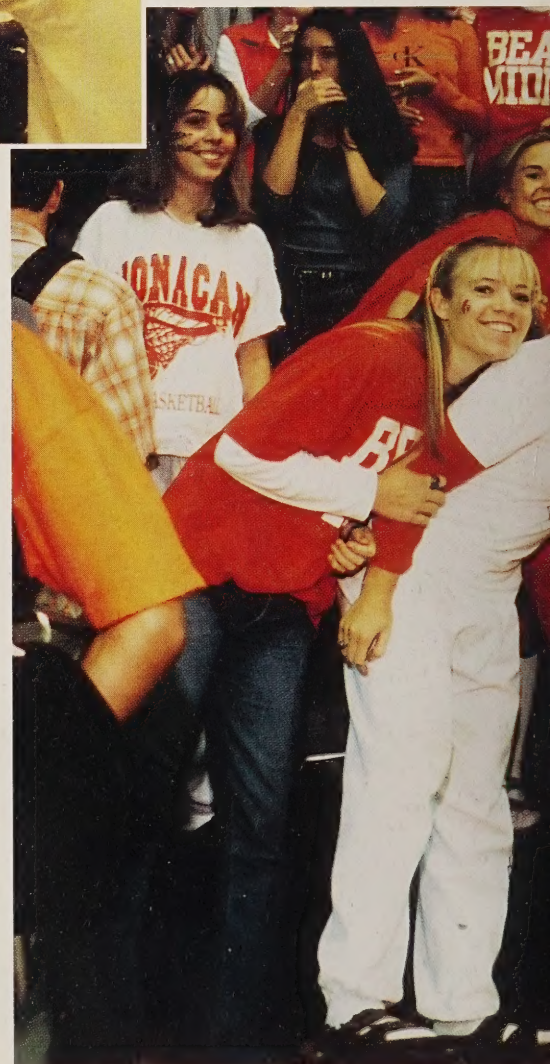

Bedtime or Lunchtime? Comfortably dressed in a bathrobe, Charles Oliver starts off Spirit Week by participating in Pajama Day. Students who wore their PJ's to school only had one thing to worry about: staying awake.

"Peace, Love, and Friendship." Reminiscing on a past era, Elizabeth Essex and Laurie Clark are dressed in hippie threads. The 70's styles are making their way back into the closets of teenagers today.

Chief Supporters. Seniors Jessica Lumsden and Courtney Ware sport their regular game day outfits. Jessica and Courtney have shown their pride in their school continuously over the years.

Spirited Teacher. Joining in on the festivities, Mr. Thackston wears a tie-dye shirt for Hippy Day. Teachers participating in Spirit Week was commonplace.

A Wacky Week

Students Show Pride By Participating in Spirit Week

One of the most exciting and eventful weeks of school was Spirit Week! Starting off the wacky week was Monday, Hat Day. Students got to break the "no hats!" rule. They wore their favorite hats: stylish baseball hats, bucket hats, and beanies. Hats could be funny and cool or dingy and old.

Double trouble Tuesday was Twin Day. Friends got to dress the same as each other. "Twin day was my favorite day, I actually got to be a twin with someone else besides my twin sister," stated senior Erin Domnick. It seemed as if the halls were flooded with clones.

The next day was Pajama Day. Fuzzy slippers and flannel pants were all around. "It was hard to stay awake. I felt like I should be at home in bed," expressed junior Annie Davis.

Thursday was Tie-dye/Hippie Day. Walking around the school was a blast from the past; bell bottoms and platform shoes were the fashion of the day. It was groovy.

Finally, Friday was Spirit Day, the day when everyone wore orange and brown. When asked what her favorite day was, freshman Kelsey Bradberry replied, "Spirit Day is my favorite day. It's when everyone dresses in orange and white." Pride shone throughout the day. "It's the one day when the school is together," says Lauren Knight. Spirit Week showed that no matter who students hang out with in school, everyone can come together for the same cause.

-Ashley Domnick

"Hey, I Have That Outfit!"

Glancing at each other, Courtney Johnson and Stephanie Kates admire each other's outfits. Twin Day was the one day of the year when it was okay to be dressed the same as someone else.

Flower Child. Blasted from the past, Melissa Chester shows her school spirit dressed in 60's style clothing. The hippies were fond of wearing flowers in their hair.

"Take Your Hat Off in the Building Please." Juniors Kelly Maynard, Chris Langgood, and Sarah Riggs take advantage of Spirit Week to wear hats during school. This day was very popular among the student body because hats are not regularly allowed in school.

"Peace Man." With various types of clothing from the 60's, Red Warren demonstrates a spirited hippie. Many hippies in the 60's wore army jackets in protest to the war.

"Juniors! Juniors!" Decked out in orange and white, members of the junior class display their spirit during the pep rally. The pep rally consisted of loudness contests, team recognition, and cheering to get the football team fired up.

It's Awesome Baby!

"Everywhere we go people want to know who we are..."

"Partner Stunts." Dan Macaluso and Taylor Phillips sit high on top of Tony Morin and Jeff Henthorn's shoulders. The guys were taught how to perform stunts and cheers for the game.

"Intensity!" Senior powder puff coaches Kevin Mapp, Cody Eyerly, and Brian Mays look on eagerly as the senior girls fight for a victory. The seniors played great in their last powder puff game.

"...so we tell them." They were the mighty, mighty powder puff participants. With 250 girls playing, which was more than ever before, the stands were packed, the girls were ready, and the cheerleaders were hyped. The big event was kicked off this year with a slight variation from the norm. This year the bonfire was held prior to the game, which helped to get everyone excited and ready for action. "It was a great way to get everyone motivated," comments Heather Misorski. The atmosphere reflected the team rivalry with class chants echoing throughout the fall night. Every person present felt a sense of class and school pride.

As the night continued the freshmen and sophomores piled onto the field while the infamous male cheerleaders helped to pep them into aggressiveness. The incredibly close game had a score of 0-0 when the clock ran out. During overtime in an exciting play, the freshmen scored the winning touchdown for the win. Next the junior and senior girls took the field.

The winner of the junior-senior powder puff game was... there wasn't one. For the first time in history the game went into triple overtime with a final score of 6-6. "I wish we could have finished out the game," commented Jennifer Geer. Although no one was able to claim victory, everyone played to her potential and came out a winner.

The half-time show was jam packed with school spirit and student involvement. The male cheerleaders went crazy with their routine and kept everyone pumped for the game. Afterwards, each grade level's princes were honored and escorted onto the field, and the Homecoming King Jimmy Roberts was crowned. With more student involvement than ever before, the game was a huge success. It not only helped to unite the school, but it proved that girls really can play football.

-Stacey Walden and Kelly Sorrells

"Hail to the King." During half time of the junior-senior powder puff game, Homecoming King, Jimmy Roberts, was crowned. Since the beginning of Powder Puff, it has been a tradition to crown the king at the game.

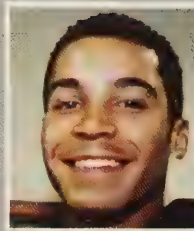

FRONT & CENTER

"We did not cheat. Even though they never listened to me it was still cool." Daniel Scott (9)

"It was fun and entertaining. I enjoyed teaching so many girls how to play football." Jeremy Hite (10)

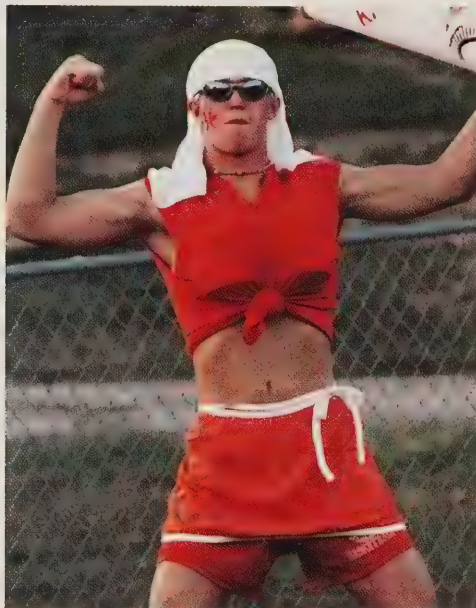

"I'm very proud of my girls, and the way they played. We are the only undefeated class, and the sophmores better watch out next year." Chad Davis (11)

"It was funny watching how seriously some of the girls took the game. I have enjoyed working with my girls throughout the year" Kevin Mapp (12)

Mud-Wrestling I thought this was Powder Puff practice. Struggling to learn plays in the rain, practice in the mud turned out to be way more fun than anyone thought possible.

"Is That Heather Locklear?" Close enough. Jeff Henthorn shows his stuff as a Powder Puff cheerleader.

"Check Out Those Babes!" As a powder puff tradition, junior and senior guys dress up as cheerleaders and pep up the girls. The Varsity cheerleaders worked with the guys to help them learn an awesome routine.

"Go Sophomores!" The sophomores went all out in class spirit. Katie Harvey and Jeremy Hite take a break before the big game.

"Best Wishes." High above the crowd, Senior Allison Stevens tells the Juniors to have fun in high school next year. The seniors were in great spirits for their last pep rally.

"Ah-Ooh-Ah-Ah-Ah." Showing their spirit, the Junior class cheers along during the class competitions. These contests never fail to bring out everyone's school spirit.

"Almighty Chief." Varsity cheerleader Sarah Riggs compliments Matt Macey on his great outfit. Matt Macey was our Chief mascot this year.

"Let's Win!" It's all smiles when the varsity cheerleaders step it up with their high energy cheers. The cheerleaders worked hard to make everything perfect for the pep rally.

"Fire It Up." Varsity football captain Kevin Mapp gives an inspiring and enthusiastic speech to pump up the students and the players. Kevin was a great leader for the football team.

"I love getting the school hyped up. Everyone has great spirit." Molly Peehler

"It was great seeing everyone in so much orange, and so pumped up for the game." Jessica Lumsden

"I like the pep rallies because I can show my support." Galen Parker

"The pep rally was a great end to spirit week" Kelly Mayers

FRONT & CENTER

"Gimme a C." With lots of energy and excitement, the varsity cheerleaders spell out "CHIEFS" to each of the classes. All the Monacan cheerleaders gathered around, and chanted along.

"Introduction, Ladies First"
Leading the students through the festivities, John Feeney and Adam Brock tell the students of the events to come. John Feeney and Adam Brock were funny and spirited hosts throughout the pep rally.

"Leading Ladies" With attitude and style, the Monacettes give it their all to hype up the crowd. The Monacettes always have an exciting dance to perform for the pep rally.

"Go Chiefs, Beat Midlo!" An orange, brown, and white wave of students flooded into the gym waiting for the pep rally's excitement to begin. "Go Chiefs" clickers were passed out to the seniors and proved to be great noise makers for this event.

To start off, the Monacettes took the floor with their creative and energetic dance moves. John Feeney and Adam Brock then stepped up to be our hosts for this spirited event. John Feeney commented, "I'm glad I could spark the attitude of the students for the game."

Next, all fall sports teams were recognized for their outstanding achievements during the season. The cheerleaders then came out and gave us a show with their high flying stunts and cheers. Varsity cheerleader Angelina Smith stated, "I love being able to cheer to such an enthusiastic crowd." To show their spirit before the pep rally, the cheerleaders were not allowed to talk all day, and those who did had to pay the price. All cheerleaders that broke the rule had to do 50 push-ups as punishment.

The class competitions were next to follow. "C-H-I-E-F-S Chiefs" was screamed by each class to see who could be the loudest. The seniors were victorious once again. Sophomore Jimmy Lee exclaimed, "The class competitions are the best part of the pep rally!" The pep rally was a great success in helping to get players and students hyped up for the homecoming game.

- Kelly Sorrells

"You're On It 5." Preparing for his debut, John Feeney gets ready to lead the pep rally. John's spirit and personality earned him a spot as a host.

"Football 101"
Standing on the sidelines, the varsity football players watch as the students show their spirit. The pep rally let the team know that it had the school's support.

Homecoming

A Spirited Beginning

Hail to the Queen. During half-time, Kelly Harvey accepts the Homecoming Queen title. She has been nominated for princess all four years.

Chief Pride. Taking a break from chanting with the Varisty Cheerleaders, school mascot, Matt Macey flashes his pearly whites. The mascot is a spirited reminder of Chief pride.

"Beat Midlo! Trash Trojans!" These chants could be heard in the gym on Friday afternoon. Students, teachers, and even parents anticipated the exciting weekend to come. Once again Homecoming weekend was off to a spirited start. Kicking off the festivities, students met in the Smoketree Pool parking lot to create personalized floats, which would be used to showcase different organizations. The students on the floats cheered wildly and threw candy to liven up the bystanders. While the parade came to an end, the crowds filled the stadium to watch the competitive game against our rivals, Midlothian.

The game got off to a flawless start and the crowd was hoping for nothing less than victory. At halftime, we were confident of victory as the half time show got underway. The anxious senior nominees awaited the announcement of the Homecoming Queen. This years' nominees were Delina Robinson, Amy Carter, Megan Shipstedt, Katie Healy, and Kelly Harvey. A glowing smile overcame Kelly Harvey as her name echoed throughout the entire stadium while she was being announced queen. Kelly was escorted off the field by Senior King, Jimmy Roberts, and they were presented to the crowd as Monacan's royalty for the weekend.

As the king and queen were driven out of the stadium, the players aggressively hustled back onto the field to finish the game. Our lead slipped toward the end, but the team fought with all their might throughout the game. The Homecoming weekend brought out the spirit and pride of the entire community and student body.

-Stephanie Weiler and Kelly Wilson

On the March. Moving slowly down Smoketree Drive, the marching band awaits the next song. The band helped to make the crowd more enthusiastic throughout the season.

Torture the Trojans. "Off with his head", says Jeff Arrington as Jonathan Mann hangs helplessly. The French Club float was one of the countless foreign language floats that were in the parade.

All Eyes Watching. All eyes penetrate through Joey Fore as he kicks a field goal to increase the score. The kicker is a vital position that other teammates depend on.

Follow the Leader. As the floats creep along, students cheer and throw candy to the bystanders. The community's support is always shown at the annual parade.

Go Chiefs! Go! Chanting with all their might, Connie Boehling, Amy Zachary, and Haley Phillips came to cheer the chiefs to victory. These girls have been found at numerous sporting events showing pride.

Sly Guy. Sneaking from behind, Wilbur Penick and Jeremy Hite tried their best to slow the opposing runningback from advancing. Players often doubled their efforts to take down opponents.

What Now? Dazed and Confused, Chad Davis and on-looking teammates look to Coach Daniels not only for instructions, but inspiration. Players often paused for a moment to concentrate on the next play.

FRONT & CENTER

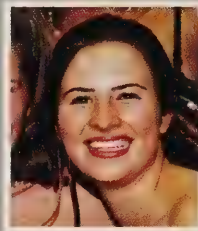

"The dance was a lot of fun, and being a Homecoming princess was an honor."
-Kelsie Bradberry

"It was fun and entertaining."
-Jeremy Hite

"It had a good variety of music that everyone could get down to."
-Daniel Jones

"It was my best homecoming ever."
-Jacqueline Hall

Pump It Up. Shari Gray and Tameka Hunt get down and groove to the music. Dressing up in evening gowns allowed students to show off their finest.

Wide Grins. Pausing in their dance, Shawn Wyckoff and Eddie Lohr pose for the camera. Pictures helped to preserve lifetime memories.

Bumping and Grinding. Students get wild and crazy as the music gets louder. The DJ played music that appealed to everyone.

Swing My Way. Finding a beat to dance to, Jennie Garriques swings her hips in rhythm to the music. Music with a good beat made dancing fun for everyone.

Tearing Up the Dance Floor. Frank Darnold expresses his love for dancing as he breakdances across the floor. People's different styles made the dance interesting.

Stairway to Heaven

Hip Hop, Country, and Rap Make a Night to Remember

It was Saturday, and the mood was right. For many people, the long day meant busy preparations, with the hope that the night would be filled with glamour. Girls spent hours fixing their hair, makeup and nails, while the guys worked on straightening their ties, preparing their cars and picking up their corsages. The guys embarked on what they thought would be the longest night of their lives; the girls began what they hoped would be the most memorable.

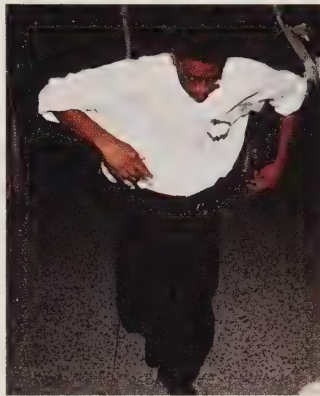

People arrived as couples, friends, stag or observers, and the evening lived up to the expectations of most. Jessica Bolt stated, "I went with my best friend just because we are best friends!" Some people's boyfriends and girlfriends came home from college to escort their dates to the big dance.

Many people have different opinions about what the most enjoyable part of the night was. When asked what her favorite part of the dance was, Angelina Smith said, "My favorite part was dancing the night away with my boyfriend." Some enjoyed dinner or even after-dance events better than the dance itself. Rockie Sun said, "I personally enjoyed dinner and the after dance activities more than the dance." The night provided a good time for everyone as they danced on a stairway to heaven.

-Tim Irby

Wow! Students gather around to watch Sean Scully dance energetically and humorously. Students enjoyed watching each other show off their moves.

Jamming to the Beat. As the crowd forms a circle, Ahmad Watkins becomes the center of attention as he grooves to the music. The night was an opportunity for students' true sides to be seen through their dancing.

Take a Load Off. Students huddle around the table to chat and get some fresh air. After working up a sweat, dancers needed to take a break and get refreshments.

Slow Down. Dancing to a slow song, senior princess Katie Healy and Taylor Phillips hold each other close. A romantic mood prevailed as the dance came to a close.

His Royal Majesty. Senior Jimmy Roberts and his date, Katie Harvey, waved to the crowd. Jimmy was crowned Homecoming King at the powder puff game earlier that week.

Fashion Fixation

Cargo Pants and Bell
Bottoms are Back!

Brandname... Students found fashionable clothes at these and other stores. Everyone knew stores where they could find the perfect outfit.

Eating in Style. Casey Sanders sports a long-sleeve Polo tee with cargo jeans. Comfortable and stylish was the way to go.

What is fashion? Junior, Shannell Jones, explained, "Fashion is a way of displaying your style and personality through the latest wear." As styles changed, students shopped. Always trying to keep up with the latest trend got expensive, but it was worth it to some students.

Colors, styles, and trends presented opportunities for students to express their personalities. Junior, Ashley Zapach, commented "Fashion presents a freedom of expression." Colors reflected the mood of each student. Blacks and blues created a dismal, however, calm mood; reds and oranges screamed, and pink communicated a gentleness. "Neon colors will still be in come the future," stated Sophmore, Jimmy Lee. What colors will the future hold? The answer remains to be seen

Name brands such as Abercrombie & Fitch, American Eagle, Polo, Tommy, Express, Old Navy, Aeropostale and FUBU were popular. Students often shopped in the same stores as their friends which gave different groups distinctive looks. Everyone had a look that made a statement about who they were.

People say that history repeats itself. We proved that fashion does. Girls' fashions had a 70's twist to them and included cardigan sets, bell bottoms, and platform shoes. Guys' preferred khaki cargo pants, Structure jeans, fleece, plaid, button down collared shirts, and long sleeved T-shirts. All of these were comfortable clothes that kept the guys looking good.

- Jamar Arvin

Dressing Comfortably! Walking down the hall, Tina Figueroa, wears the ever-popular combination of overalls and a bandana. Comfortable and practical, overalls will probably never go out of style.

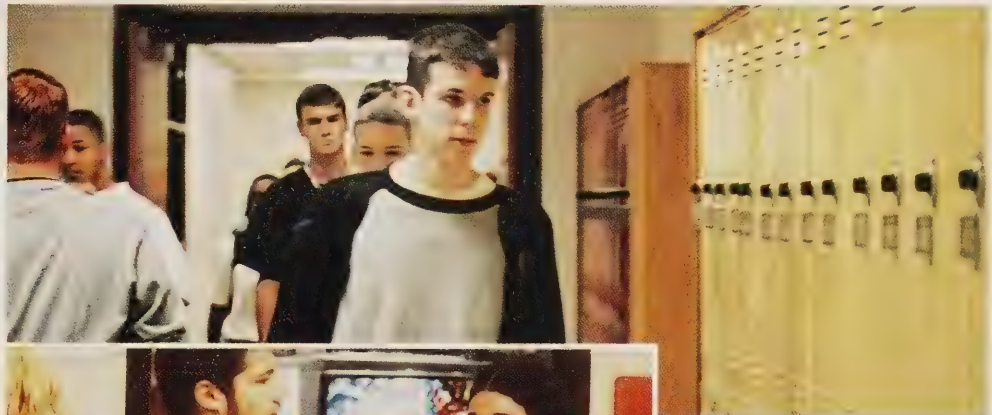

"Walk this way" Representing three styles. Lindsay Martin, Alicia Williams, Brooke Tinsley, and Puja Mukherje go to class. Clamdiggers, name brand jackets, and 70's style striped shirts were in.

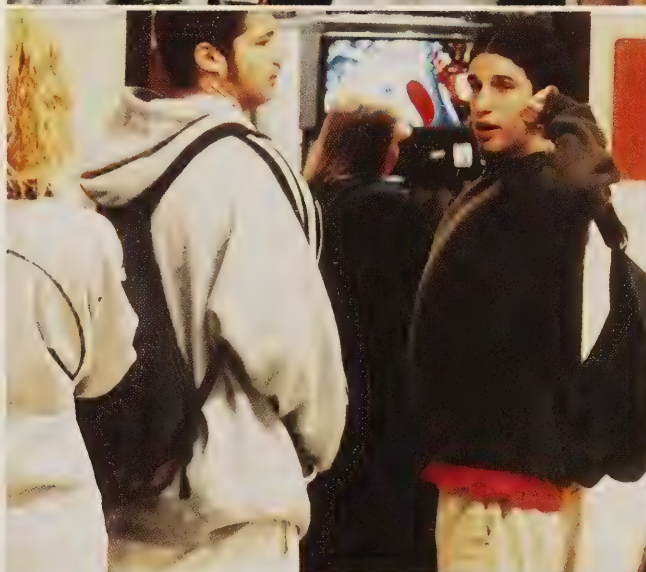

Strike a Pose! Wearing a Nautica jacket, La Shauna Cuffy stays in style. Many students wore Nautica, Tommy Hilfiger, and Polo jackets.

Fashion with a touch of school spirit... Staci Hoover sports her Aeropostale sweatshirt with the CHIEF emblem. Several students showed school spirit through clothing.

Back to Basics... Keeping it simple, but stylish, Zach Wadsworth wears a sweater. Shirts with contrasting arms were in.

Side-by-Side... While standing in the lunch line Ryan Baldwin and Chad Newton relax in khakis. Khakis were dressier than jeans, but easy to relax in: perfect for school.

Guys... Shopping Discussing whether or not a new Amfex jacket is needed, Justin Love and Michael Shepperson try to keep up with fashion. Since it was always changing, students had to stay alert for new trends.

Stepping Into the Millennium

10, 9, 8, 7, 6,.....

AND THEN

5, 4, 3, 2, 1.... The moment we had all been waiting for, the year 2000! As streamers flew and confetti floated, one thought ran through every person's mind, "Is the world going to end?" Some people believed this century would be the end and others said it was just going to be another year. Nevertheless, the answer to that question was up to every person to decide for themselves.

Now as we leap into the millennium, we will be faced with a chance to start over, new experiences, and a world of new and unbelievable technology. Many things have changed since the beginning of the century. The one thing that has developed greatly in this century is technology. Cars have gone from a speedy 15 miles per hour to a roaring 180 miles per hour. In the next millennium, we could be introduced to solar powered cars that will reach unbelievable speeds. Secondly, television was a luxury in the middle of the century. It was small and almost looked like a radio. Today's television ranges in style from a big screen to a flat screen. The millennium may bring a television with a 3-D image. How cool would that be? Music is another thing that has come a long way in this century. Records have been converted to eight tracks, then to cassettes, to CDs and finally to mini-discs. In the future, maybe CD players will have a screen on them. That way CDs could be listened to and the video of the song could be watched at the same time. Lastly, the telephone has been changed from dialing through the operator, to rotary dialing, to touchtone dialing, and now to voice activated dialing. The cellular phone has also been invented and become a very popular thing to own. Maybe in the 21st century, cell phones will be designed so people can see the person they are communicating with.

Until the ball dropped we partied because it was 1999. Then we looked back on the last century and everything that had happened. We remembered good times and imagined what would come in the future.

-Natalie Smith and Kelly Sorrells

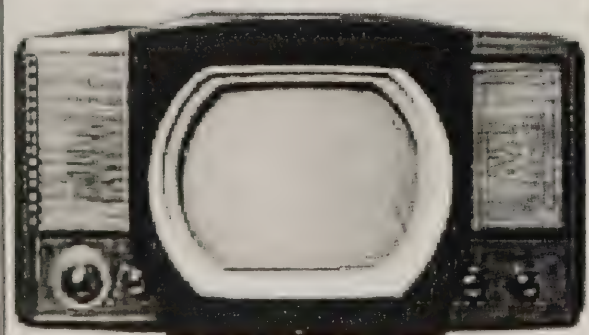

1. "Hello." The Brass Dial Candlestick telephone was a very popular phone in the 1920s. Phones back then had rotary dialing and separate pieces for talking and listening.

2. "Oh No! A Scratch!" Records were made by cutting grooves in the vinyl and they were played with a needle. Now DJs use them to make mixes and new beats."

3. "Built Strong to Last Long." On December 2, 1927, history was made when Ford introduced the Model A Ford. The car was new in appearance, performance, and mechanical design.

4. "Get Up and Change the Channel." The RCA 630TS was the first post war tabletop television. The large screen, as seen here, was only 15 inches wide.

The Vacation Is Over

Rise and Shine. Standing in line for breakfast, students start their day the right way with a warm meal from the cafeteria. Students often find themselves buying breakfast at school rather than eating mom's home cooking.

Together again. Best friends Stacey Baldwin, Heather Mitchell, Jenny Brassfield, and Megan Moxley gather at lunch to catch up on the summer's hottest happenings. After summer vacation, friends have tons of great stories to tell.

The parking lot filled, the bell rang, and the halls came to life after three long months of summer vacation. To the freshmen class, this day was a new beginning. To seniors, it was the beginning of the end. To everyone else, it was just the start of another year in high school, where the new freshmen were picked on, and the juniors were thrilled about finally being upperclassmen.

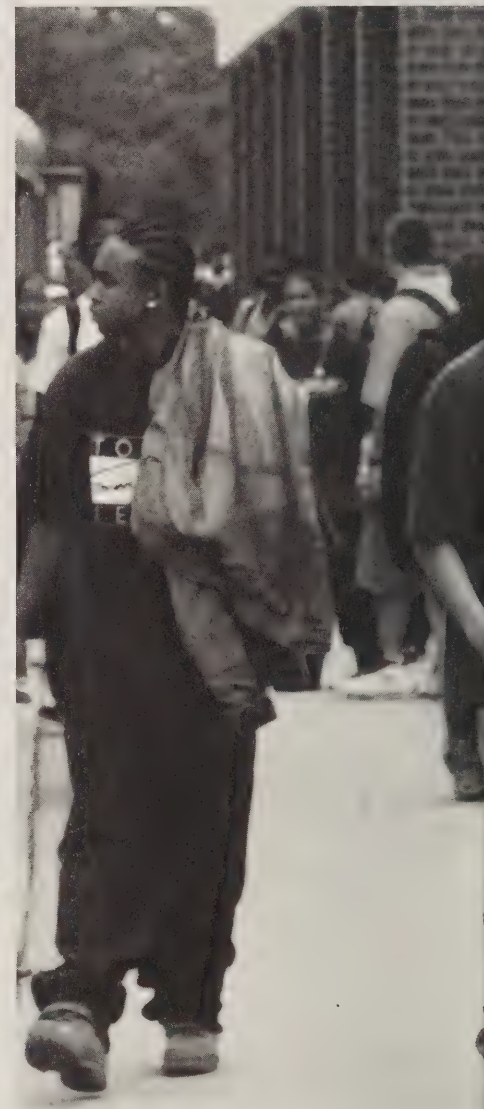

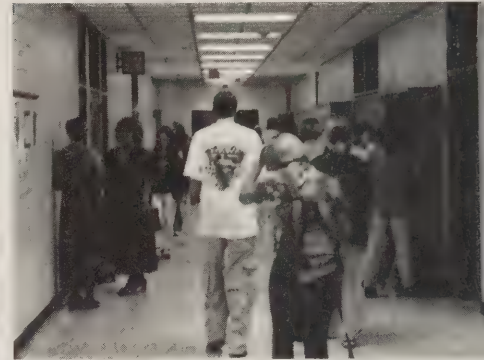

"For me the first day of school was overwhelming. At first I was kind of nervous, but it got better as the day went on." Allie Moore isn't the only freshmen with these feelings. "I was a little scared because not many of my friends were in my classes," confesses Megan Nicely. "Luckily I found most of them at lunch. The first day of school for freshmen was filled with fear of the unknown, and the excitement of a new experience.

"It was just another day of school. I was looking forward to seeing my friends, but I wasn't looking forward to homework." For sophomore Bonnie Kessler the first day of school was like any other. Most sophmores and juniors agreed that the first day wasn't that exciting.

"I can't believe that it's almost over!" exclaims senior Jennifer Strickland. "I've been in high school for what seems like forever, and it's hard to imagine that it's my last year." Senior year was a time to prepare for the future whether it be going to college or starting a career in the real world. Seniors also took this year to look back on fond memories of the past four years before they stepped into the future.

- Ryanne McCarraher & Courtney Burke

Check Your Schedule. Quickly trying to find their next class, students scurry through the halls searching for the right room. The fear of walking into the wrong room runs rampant through the minds of new students.

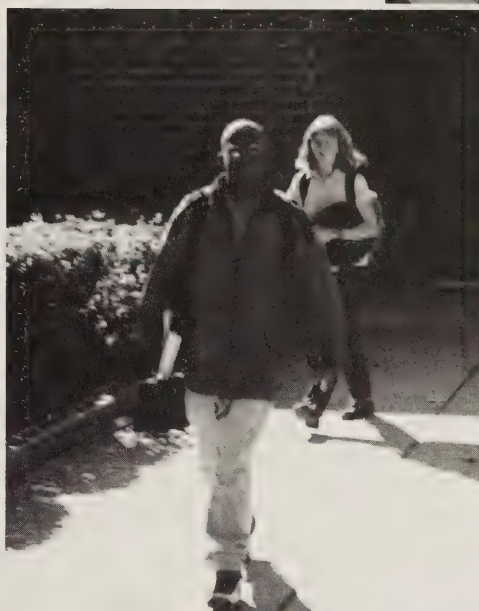

Single File. Patiently waiting in line for their turn, Sean Buckley, Jimmy Whitehead, Cory Barnett, and Daniel Costello talk about the day's events while they wait for lunch. During lunch, students got a chance to goofoff and joke around with friends.

Yum, Yum, Yum. Enjoying the first lunch of the year, Peter Pavell, Amber Petrohovich, Jose Hidalgo, and Dan Macaluso go over schedules to find out what classes they have together. Finding out who has what class is a big deal the first day back.

Once Again. Slowly strolling toward the doors, students head inside to meet old friends and start another year of school. On the first day of school, it is hard to get up and meet the bus.

Rushing for Freedom. Heading out of sixth period, Thomas Mandley strolls towards his car and an afternoon free of school. Though the first day is exciting, students miss the summer's freedom.

Memories, Memories. Looking back on memories from last year, Alana Sloan and Mandy Yates look forward to having more memorable moments. Four years in high school can produce some amazing memories.

Aiming High. Striving to make an "A", Jeffrey Scarborough talks over an assignment with science teacher, Mrs. Blackmore. Students try to impress their new teachers on the first day.

"I buy all my car audio equipment from Audio Express."
- Cameron Britland

"I go to E-lite image for total car performance."
- Qunicy Taylor

"I enjoy modifying my car because it's my hobby and I enjoy it."
- Cory W.

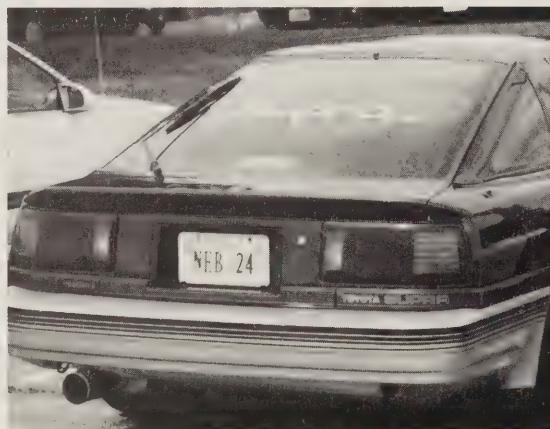

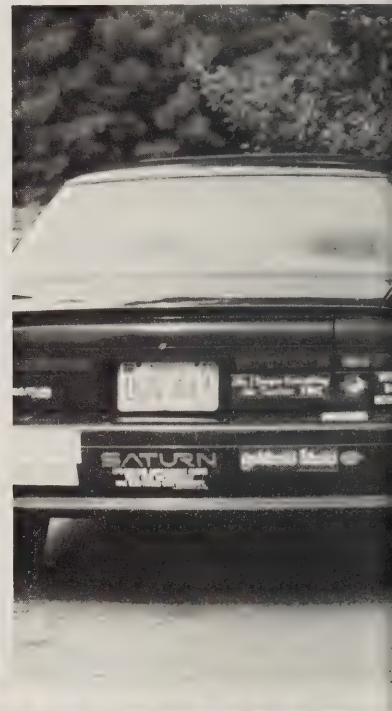

"I go to Circuit City for my automotive accessories."
- Aaron Goodwin

A Classy Ride! A minority of the students drive their parents luxurious cars, especially this one which is sported by Monteil Crawley. (Hopefully the car will come home in the same condition.)

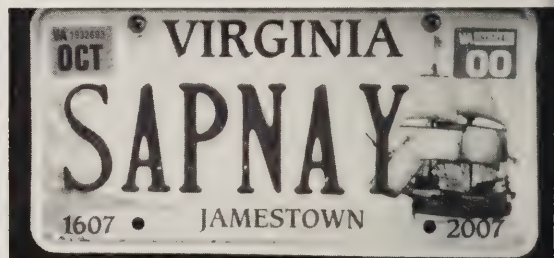

How Informative! This maroon Saturn Sedan sports the bumper stickers all over the back of the car. Bumper stickers are a way for students to express their ideas and interests, especially favorite bands and radio stations.

How Low Can It Go? Tate Harvey has transformed his 1992 S-10 pickup truck into a low rider. All of Tate's modifications were done at E-lite Image.

Look At the Big Decal! The owner of the Toyota Supra, Ben Arner, has hooked his car up by adding the Supra Decal, new exhaust, and strips to the lower body of the car.

Ready To Launch! Junior Billy Gully, the owner of the 1995 Saturn SC2, added a spoiler to his ride, making the car more sporty. Students do not always have the most expensive looking cars, but they add features to make them seem more sporty.

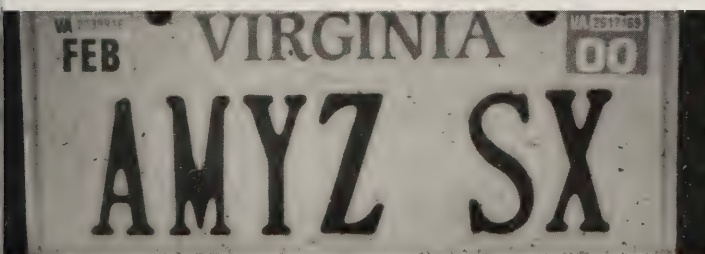

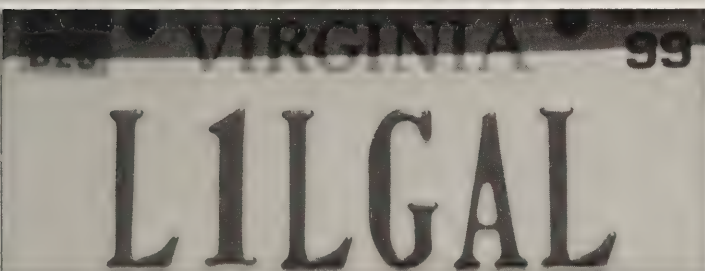

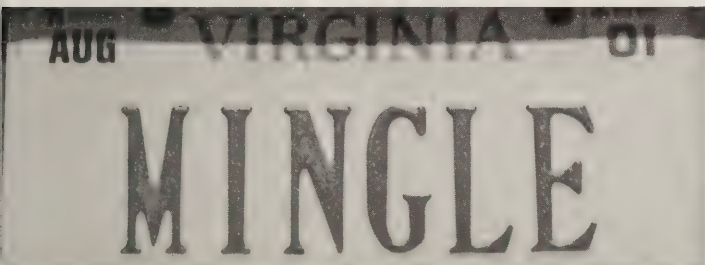

Getting Around Town

Uptown,
Downtown,
All Around Town

What is the most important thing to an average high school student? A Car!! The number of students driving to school increased every year. It was like a car dealership in the student parking lot. There were many different types, styles, colors, and models of cars. Automobiles range from sports cars, sedans, jeeps, and trucks. Students choose to buy new cars, some decided to restore classics, and others fixed up the average type of car. Some even added a bumpin' stereo system.

When asked why he spent so much money and time on his car, Josh Shepard answered "I spend vast amounts of money because it's my hobby and I enjoy it." Rachel Muh answered, "Bobby at Elite Image does all my modifications. I plan to show the car over the summer after I get ground effects and finish with the system. I love fixing it up, but it's an expensive hobby that requires a lot of savings." Though students spend great amounts of money on modifying their cars, one question that never seemed to pop up in their minds was, "Is it really worth it?"

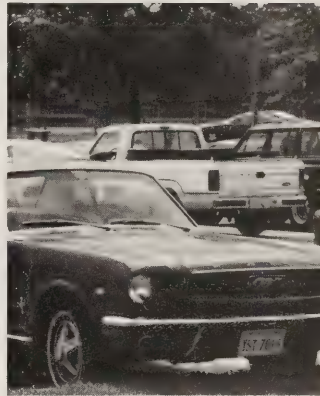

-Sumit Kukreja

Driving Expressions! Students like to personalize their plates to show their possessions and personality.

An Average Car Hooked Up! The rightful owner of the 1993 Type R Civic is Josh Shepard. The modifications that have been done are clear corner lights, dropped suspension, and 17" TSW Rims.

What a Classic! Matt Macey, the owner of the 1966 Ford Mustang, took the time and money to restore his car. The car is nearly in mint condition.

A Compact Sports Car at its Finest! This 1998 Mitsubishi Eclipse has been fixed up with modifications such as suspensions and mirror tints. The owner, senior Rachel Muh hopes to show her car after making further modifications.

Ready To Drive To the Mountains! This Grand Jeep Cherokee would be fun to drive on a ski trip. The only drawback on any SUV is the fuel economy.

The 411 on Friday Nights

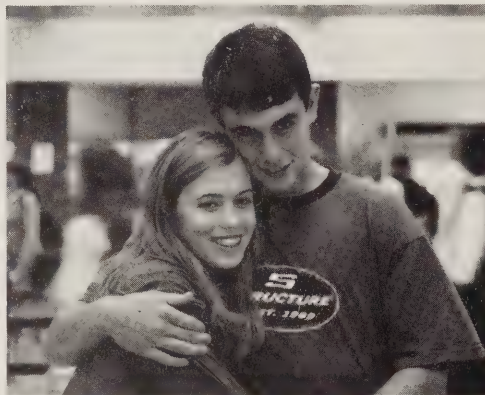

"Dinner and a movie, classic and easy but always fun."

-Matt Spears

Cuddle Up! Taking advantage of limited time, Matt Spears and Lindsay Driscoll enjoy time together when Lindsay is home. Matt said, "Long distance relationships are very hard, but they are the best."

Smile! Having dated since last year, Crystal Stewart and Sean Kelly wrap their arms around one another to show their feelings toward each other. Relationships that last a long time are the most special.

It was Monday! Students filled the halls and constant chatter was heard by many about the past weekend's events. For most students, dates were a hot topic.

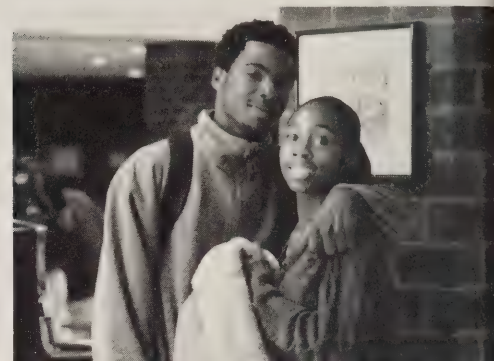

Although dating was common, especially among high school students, there was confusion as to what dating meant. Everyone's definition seemed to vary in some way. For some it meant just hanging out, and for others it was a chance to get to know someone. P.J. Whiteway stated, "Obviously it means you're not locked into a relationship with that person." Cassie Aboy explained, "You are not somebody's boyfriend/girlfriend. You just go places together and have fun. You can also see others when you are dating as well."

When Friday nights rolled around, much planning was put into the evening's events. Students had to decide who to go out with and where to go. When asked what a typical date was, the majority agreed upon dinner and a movie. While others, like Josh Savilisky, thought Maymont Park was a good place to take a date. Alicia Rogers remarked, "It doesn't have to be a real special thing. As long as I'm with the person I care about, I'm fine."

Even though students had different definitions of dating, most agreed that it was definitely better than being single. Woody Wilkinson commented, "It is better to be dating because you have someone to share things with."

-Katie Anderson and Tasha Feller

It's All About Us! Greeting each other in the commons, Nicole Russell and Ron Witherspoon enjoy each other's company. The two have been dating for three years, and their relationship keeps getting better.

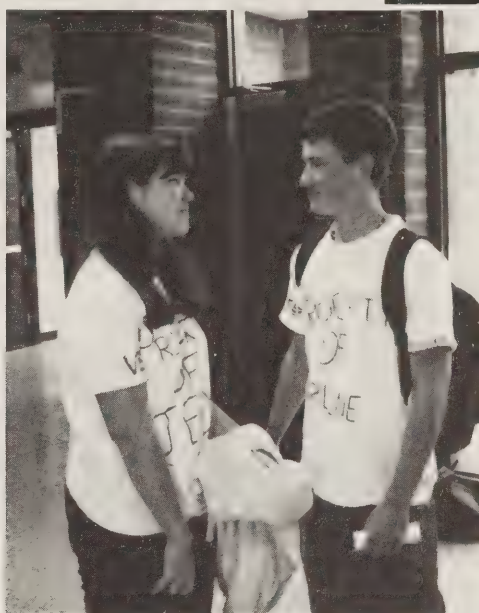

Small Talk! Using lunch as a time to chat, Erin Groat and Tim Milligan catch up with one another on the day's activities. Erin and Tim began dating just before the start of school and have been happy together ever Welcoming Arms! New student, Jerry Price, receives a warm, friendly hug from Puja Sardana. The two met at the start of the year when Jerry transferred from James River.

"What's His is Hers and Hers is His." Approaching each other with a warm smile, Darlene Noble and Jed Leidheiser express their togetherness on Twin Day. Over the summer, Darlene and Jed decided to enhance their friendship by dating.

Lunch Time Chatter. Exchanging a friendly glance, Michael Felice and Renee Glisson converse over lunch. Aside from being involved in extracurricular activities, Michael and Renee enjoy spending time together.

Dating a Rival. Spending time together on the weekend, Cory Hughes and Dana Burchett do not let the fact that they attend rival schools stop them from dating. Many students date friends they have met from nearby schools.

"Hold a True Friendship Between Both Your Hands."
Crystal Jolley takes this Nigerian proverb to heart as she greets Naomi Wallace with a hug after Senior Convocation. The event was the first official recognition of the Class of 2000.

Double Trouble. Cassie Aboy and Tracy Eubank catch up on the latest gossip during lunch on "Twin Day." This special spirit day gave friends the opportunity to show their connection by wearing identical outfits.

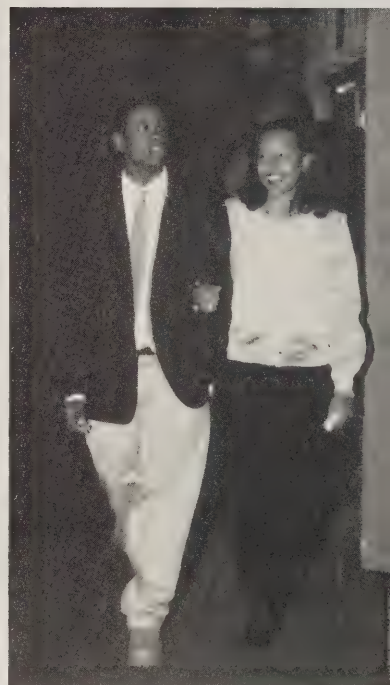

"Girls Just Wanna Have Fun!" Juniors, Meredith Dillard, Jessie Mannix, and Whitney Hand swing and sway to the music. The girls met through common activities such as the fall musical and show choir.

"The Wheels on the Bus..." During their fifth grade field trip to D.C., elementary school studs, Chris Eells and Brendan Halligan ham for the camera. Many students have been friends since those days at Gordon and Reams.

Hand in Hand. Daronne Goree and Tasha Jones process into the auditorium during Senior Convocation. Students were allowed to pick their own partners for the formal procession.

"A great friend doesn't always understand you and maybe can't relate, but you can always count on him, no matter what."

Alicia Rogers

Some Things Never Change. Gordon grads stand on stage awaiting their fifth grade diplomas. Though eight years have passed, the same faces still remain as seniors look forward to receiving their diplomas.

Strike a Pose. Developing divas, Heather Howells and Kelly Kennett show their eighth grade stuff. These drama queens have shared their talent through forensics, drama, and show choir all four years of high school.

Not so Dazed and Confused. Juniors Robert Fore and Patrick Smith, share a smile and chat it up during lunch. The 20 minute lunch period flies by as some students forgo their food for talk.

"A friend is one to whom one may pour out all the contents of one's heart, chaff and grain together, knowing that the gentlest of hands will take and sift it, keep what is worth keeping and, with the breath of kindness, blow the rest away." This Arabian proverb embodies what a high school teenager believes his friend truly is.

In the crazy lives teens lead, good friends can be the difference between sanity and insanity. Be it the "fab five" who have been super-glued together since the cradle, or the couple who met yesterday and are destined to be connected until death, friends are the saving grace of life.

Many great friendships start with a bang while some follow a natural course. Senior Megan Tuttle said she met her childhood chum and fellow senior, Becca Vaughan, in kindergarten. "We met when I threw a fork at her and told her to get out of my nap spot. Our friendship started with a fight but we've been friends ever since." Tracy Eubank met her best friend, Cassie Aboy, when Cassie moved to Virginia from Florida. "We met on the playground. From that point on we were best friends. We used to sit in Cassie's driveway and play those 'little kid' games." While many friendships fade, others strengthen, but true friends are those who are there no matter how much time passes.

-Patricia Pineda

"Thank Heaven For Little Girls..." Carrie Huffman and Darlene Noble do a little pajama dance at their fifth grade slumber party. From kindergarten until senior year, sleepovers were a convenient way to spend a free evening with friends.

Lean On Me. Seniors Christine Forte, Al Arrington, Megan Tuttle, and junior Whitney Hand find support in a warm group hug. Through personal and academic troubles, these friends have helped each other out of some trying times.

Times Change But Friendships Hold Strong

repetition, lap, mile, round

Just A Little Further! Running the mile, sophomore Ryan McAllister sprints for a good running time. The average time for a 15-16 year old guy is 6 minutes and 25 seconds.

Stretch It Out. Outside on a beautiful day, the sophomore girls' gym class stretch their legs out in participation of running the mile. Before running the mile, students are encouraged to limber up for their strenuous run.

Higher, Higher! While working on his abs, sophomore Andrew Bochman works out in the weight room. The leg raise in the weight room works legs, arms, and abs.

Life after school was sometimes spent doing homework and activities such as school clubs and jobs...but students always made time to exercise. Robious, Briarwood, and American Family were full of students during the week and on the weekends.

Students did many different things for exercise. Freshman Colin Stuart said, "I like to play lacrosse because it's fast-paced and physical." From a different perspective, freshman Alex Glaser noted that he enjoyed "golf because it's fun and I get to be with my friends." Other teens did various activities to burn off calories such as dancing, skateboarding, gymnastics, horseback riding, and soccer.

Some people had specific routines for everyday workouts. Usually, this involved an after school sport or an association team, which had regular practices every week. Sophomore Ryan McAllister and freshman Matt Arendall expressed "Football," was their favorite exercise, "because they get to legally inflict pain on others." This involved practices every day after school and games on Thursdays or Fridays. Other students went to the gym to take out aggression or to feel better about themselves.

Many new forms of exercise were coming about each year. This year's new rage was powerful exercise used to lose weight and to be fun. Kickboxing and Tae Bo classes were teeming with teenagers every day. Another alternate form of working out was yoga. Students said this was an excellent way to help relieve stress, and it boosted self-esteem.

Work It Guys! For stronger quads and calves, Adam Sabo, Josh Thomas, Stephen Burks, Brendan Halligan, Daniel Crowther, and Stephen Bartos practice high knees. Running cross country is an awesome way to keep in shape.

Work Those Biceps. Using free weights during gym class, freshman Marshall Vogt pumps iron to make his muscles huge. Gym classes are a way to keep students exercising.

Pump That Iron! Taking advantage of a free workout, freshman Jordan Arnold spots Matt Arendall as he works on building his strength. The incline press is one of many arm exercises that should be included in a workout.

Stretch! Remembering the most important part of the exercise, Molly Peehler stretches to warm up her muscles. Stretching is used to help reduce the risk of straining or pulling a muscle during activities.

The Bump. Even outside of practice, sophomores Dan McCabe and Jeff Congable work on their volleyball skills. The more practice that athletes get, the better they perform during the game.

1..2..3..4..5! Lifting the curl bar to improve her arm strength, freshman Kate Reitz counts out ten repetitions. Weight training helps students build strength and stamina.

"Working after school helps me learn responsibility and time management with school, work, and sports." -Annie Lipp

"It's very enriching to work with elderly people; I've learned how to work with all kinds of people." -Christine Forte

"Working relieves my stress and I love getting paychecks every Saturday." -Katie Healy

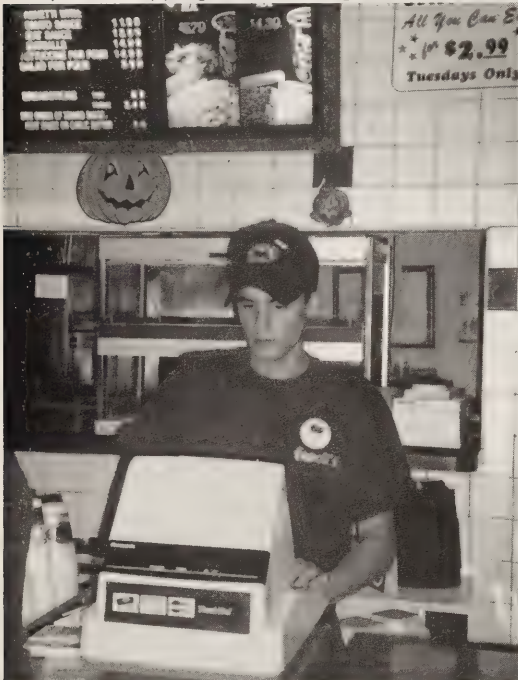

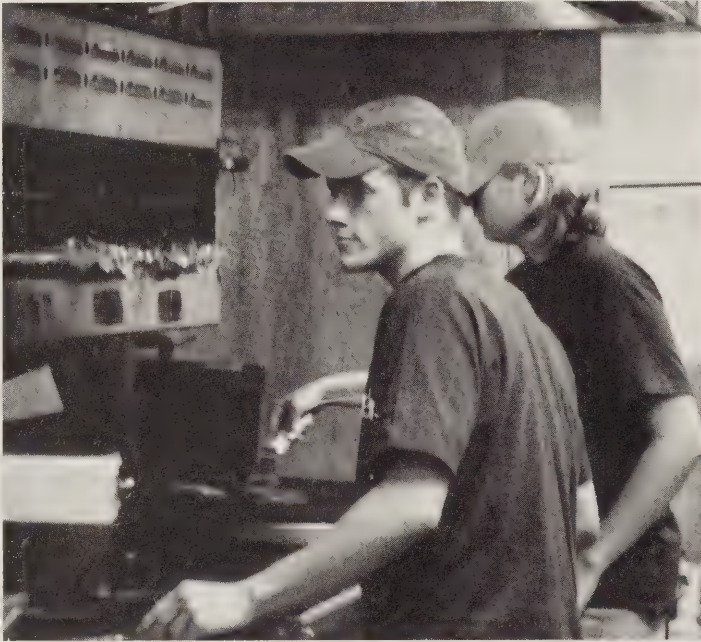

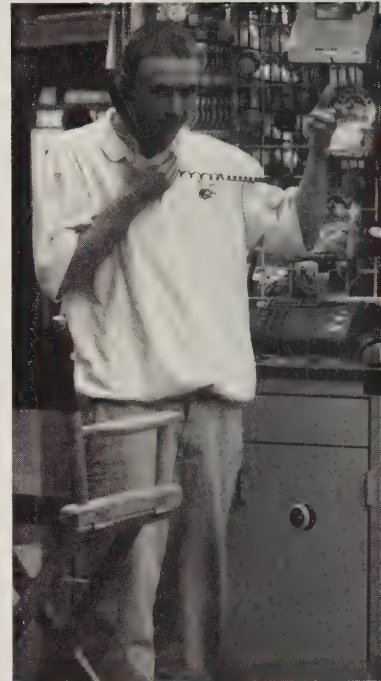

"To be able to work in telemarketing is a great way to learn communication skills." -Ashley Barrow

"Busted!" Displaying the fact that not all jobs are hard, Mike Stahl slacks off while playing with some of the merchandise at his YoYo-selling job.

"Order Up!" Spinnaker's employees, Chris Langgood and Lauren Knight, flip, sautee, and bake all the delicious food that goes into one of Spinnaker's mouthwatering dishes. Chris and Lauren must be alert when working so close to the grill.

"Can I take your order?" With concentration, Phillip Ranallo punches in the customer's order. Phillip is an employee at Fazoli's and has tasks that include washing pans, mopping, and working drive-thru.

"It'll Be Ready In A Minute!" Concentrating on the tedious task at hand, Stacey Walden screws a watch back together after replacing its battery. Stacey must be careful and precise when handling such expensive items.

"Only 15 Minutes Till Break" Neatly and carefully folding a jacket at her Limited Too job, Brooke Marshall anxiously awaits her break. Brooke's job includes ringing up customers, restocking, counting inventory, and greeting customers.

NOW HIRING

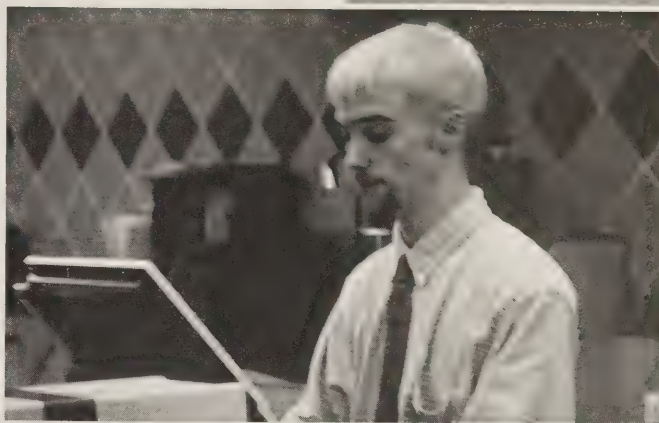

As the clock slowly moves its minute hand closer and closer to the "9," students wait anxiously for the freedom bell to give that relieving ring. For some students the tiresome six-hour day is over, but for some, it has only just begun. The never-ending day for working students continues with after school jobs that can range from the Olive Garden to telemarketing to "paper or plastic" and back again.

Although after school jobs demand a student to prioritize his time, they can offer rewards beyond an "A+" on a test. "I've learned how to manage my time since my job is in the West End; it really helped me learn how to be organized," Christina Rebman commented. Others come away from their jobs with experience and skills they can use later in life. "My job offers me good communications skills and the opportunity to join the working world at a young age," commented Kim Corrada who works in telemarketing.

Even though jobs can yield memorable experiences and the almighty dollar, time given to these jobs can start to add up. Ranging from three to seven hours a day and up to five days a week, part-time jobs require much energy that school and sports can drain.

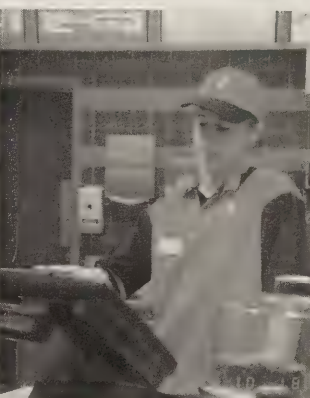

No matter the reason for after school jobs, students are content with what they pull away from the experience, whether it furthers them in life or gives them extra money for weekend.

-Ashley Haygood

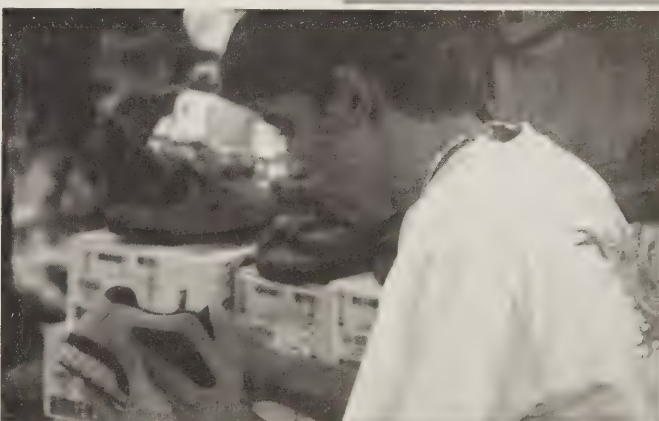

"Extra Butter?"

Ring up the customer's order, Neil Kinder looks at how much popcorn and soda he is about to prepare. Movies provide jobs in both refreshments and ticket sales.

"That'll be..." Adding up the order given by a customer, Jesse Fleeman reads off the total. With Sundays off, Chick-Fil-A is a popular job among students.

"Get on your feet"

All day long, Matt Seneath, who works in Journeys, endures countless hours of sore feet due to the constant retrieving of shoes. Luckily, he gets a discount on comfy shoes to wear to work.

"Courtesy with a Smile." Rolling out what seems to be the 100th cart of the day, Jonathan Mann still manages a smile for his customer. When getting a job at Ukrop's, one usually starts off as a courtesy clerk and works up to a cashier.

"Paper or plastic?" Among the countless other students who are employed by Ukrop's, Cory Kelly carefully places each bag of food into the cart. These clerks must be ready to brave any type of weather to deliver the customer's groceries to her car.

Life On the Outside

Chattin It Up. Before dance class starts senior Becca Vaughan and sophomore Ashley Millham have a chance to talk. They take weekly dance classes that include ballet, jazz and tap.

Kick It. At the Disney Classic soccer tournament freshman Heidi Hinson sprints to get to the ball before her opponent does. Travel soccer requires a lot of practice time away from school.

When the 1:45 bell rang, students poured out of school and hurried to their various activities. These included from sports practice, dance class, play practice, instrument lessons, and hanging out. "I go to Jeremy Hite's, watch TV, and eat popcorn," commented sophomore Matt Kalfoglou about his daily after school schedule. Many students tried to earn some extra cash by working at different jobs such as Ukrop's, Chesterfield Towne Center, and Wendy's.

There were always the out of the ordinary activities such as horseback riding, lacrosse, and drawing. "I like to take my horse, Lucky Lady, out at Saddlebrook Barn two or three times a week," sophomore Ellen D'Angelo reported. Another sophomore Craig Marshall admitted, "I like to play the kazoo in my spare time." No matter what the task, it was always worth doing.

As students wound down, more focus was put on school work and studying. Finally, it was time to relax! Sleeping has always been a popular pastime to squeeze in after school. Others went on the internet, watched TV, talked on the phone, and in general, caught up on the day's gossip.

F-R-I-D-A-Y! It was time for parties, working, concerts, shopping, movies, and hanging out. Cameron Parris, Holly Barrufalo, and Michelle Clare expressed that they were usually "chillin' like villains." The school was always buzzing on Friday nights when everyone came out to support the football and basketball teams. On Saturdays people went their separate ways and did what they enjoyed. Whether it was movies, concerts, or partying, there was always some social activity to do. Popular concerts were Pat McGee, Sauce-a-palooza, Family Values, and N'SYNC. The ticket box was bustling when Varsity Blues, The Matrix, Runaway Bride, and Sixth Sense came out. Sunday night, the last bit of forgotten homework was completed, and students prepared for another bustling week of high school.

Hard At Work. Shuffling through a clothes rack, senior Jennifer Tantillo looks for the perfect size for her customer. Knowing where things are and helping customers is a huge responsibility for a working teenager.

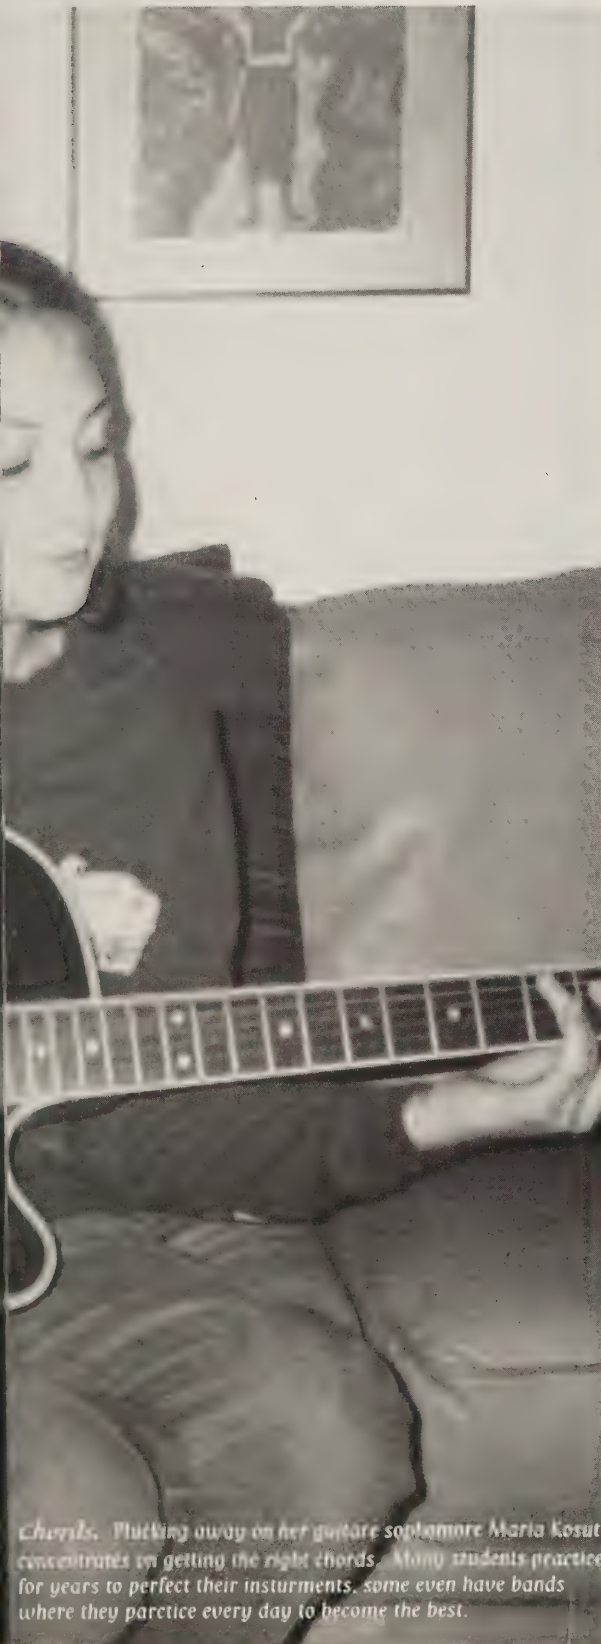

Yakety-Yak. Trying to catch up on the day's news, sophomore Stephanie Knight talks on the phone with one of her friends. Gossip is a popular pastime among teenagers.

One Ticket Please. Sophomore Ashley Diersen enjoys spending time with her friends while watching a movie on the big screen. There is no better way to relax than going to a movie.

ZZZZZs. Catching up on some much needed rest, sophomore Mark Fisher uses lunchtime to put his mind at ease. Hard classes can make anyone exhausted.

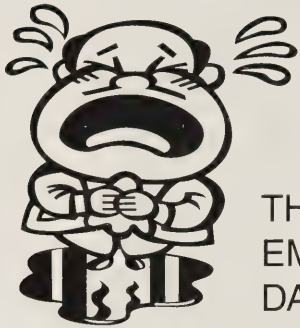

Decisions, Decisions. With all of the racks and racks of shirts and jeans, sophomore Elizabeth Carroll tries to make a choice as to which color shirt she wants. Wet Seal is a new store in Chesterfield Towne Center and is drawing attention from many teenagers.

On the Pegs. On his BMX bike, freshman Bryan McCabe practices his new moves. Many students enjoy riding bikes and skateboarding outside of school.

HUMILIATING MOMENTS STUDENTS TELL ALL

THROUGHOUT EVERY PERSON'S LIFE THERE IS AT LEAST ONE EMBARRASSING MOMENT THEY WILL NEVER FORGET. STUDENTS DARE TO SHARE A FEW OF THEIR HUMILIATING MOMENTS.

"It was a day I had to dress out for gym. I didn't remember my teacher telling me it was, so of course I was left without a gymsuit. I couldn't stand to lose any points, so I found a locker that someone had forgotten to lock, and I used their suit. Not thinking, I threw my school clothes into the locker and plodded on out to the gym. After class was over I went back into the locker room and to my dismay I found myself with a bit of a problem. Not only could I not remember what locker I had put my clothes in, but even if I knew the locker number, I had no idea the combination of the lock. For the rest of the day I had to wear someone else's gymsuit and sweatpants, and after school I spent what seemed like an hour unlocking lockers trying to find my clothes."

"It was my first year working at Monacan and even though it was getting close to the end of the year, I still hadn't met all of the faculty. One day, I'm standing over by the band room, getting ready to lock the doors where students come in from the bus loop. A student comes up to me and asks if he can run to his car to get something. By the end of the year I'm sick and tired of irresponsible students asking me to go to their cars and I begin to lecture him. Finally I sigh and say okay, but I'm going to stand here to let you back in so you better run, or I'm going to shut the doors and you will have to go around to the front to get back in. The student walks out the door and continues to walk to his car. I open the door and yell out to him to start running. He takes off running and after a few minutes he comes back in. Later on in the week I saw the same kid talking to another teacher and I ended up finding out the student was actually Mr. Birmingham."

-Mr. Waters 1111

"In class, one day I had to give a presentation. The person in front of me had just finished and now it was my turn. I stood up and began to walk to the front of the classroom. The class began laughing and when I turned around everyone was looking at me. I had no idea what I had done, but whatever it was the class found it to be pretty funny. One of my friends came over to me and said, 'Amanda, you have gum stuck all over the back of your pants.' Sure enough when I turned around, there was sticky, disgusting gum all over my jeans."

"It was a Saturday afternoon, and I was playing in a big softball game. The other team was very competitive, and so far their pitcher had thrown a no hitter. It was my turn up to bat, and I was so nervous, but I knew my team was counting on me to get a hit. I got up to the plate, and believe it or not, I hit a long shot to left field. I was so excited I ran to the left ball soar over the head as I ran to first base. Before I knew it, I had tripped and was laying over first base. I was laying my face in the dirt and everyone, including my team and coaches, was hysterically laughing at me. When I look back on it now, I can't help but laugh."

-Jessica Lumsden 12th

"I had just bought this new brown skirt, and I was dying to wear it to school for the first time. As I was walking down the hall of my school, the skirt ripped completely up the back. Unfortunately I didn't realize it until I got to my next class and the guy I had been crushing on for two years began laughing at me. One of my friends finally told me why he was laughing, and I was mortified. I had no idea. For the rest of the day I had to wear blue sweat pants with dress shoes and a dress shirt."

-Anonymus

"Before every field hockey game the goalie kicks the ball into the goal. I was doing just that when all of a sudden my foot landed on top of the ball and rolled me right onto my back. I laid there in total embarrassment hoping no one had seen me. Then Jessica Lumsden came running over from the sidelines screaming, "Are you all right?" Suddenly she grabs one of my legs and lifts it up pretending she was helping me stretch. Apparently she had seen the whole thing, and she was trying to save me the embarrassment by helping to play it off. I don't really know if it worked, but we sure got a "kick" out of it!"

-Courtney Ware 12th

Time for dessert! Picking his nose with no sense of embarrassment, Red Warren is caught. This is one of the most emarrassing things a person can be caught doing.

Still hungry?
Sharing his lunch, Steven Burks forces a tasty ham sandwich in Matt Macey's mouth. Friends often goof around and try to embarrass one another.

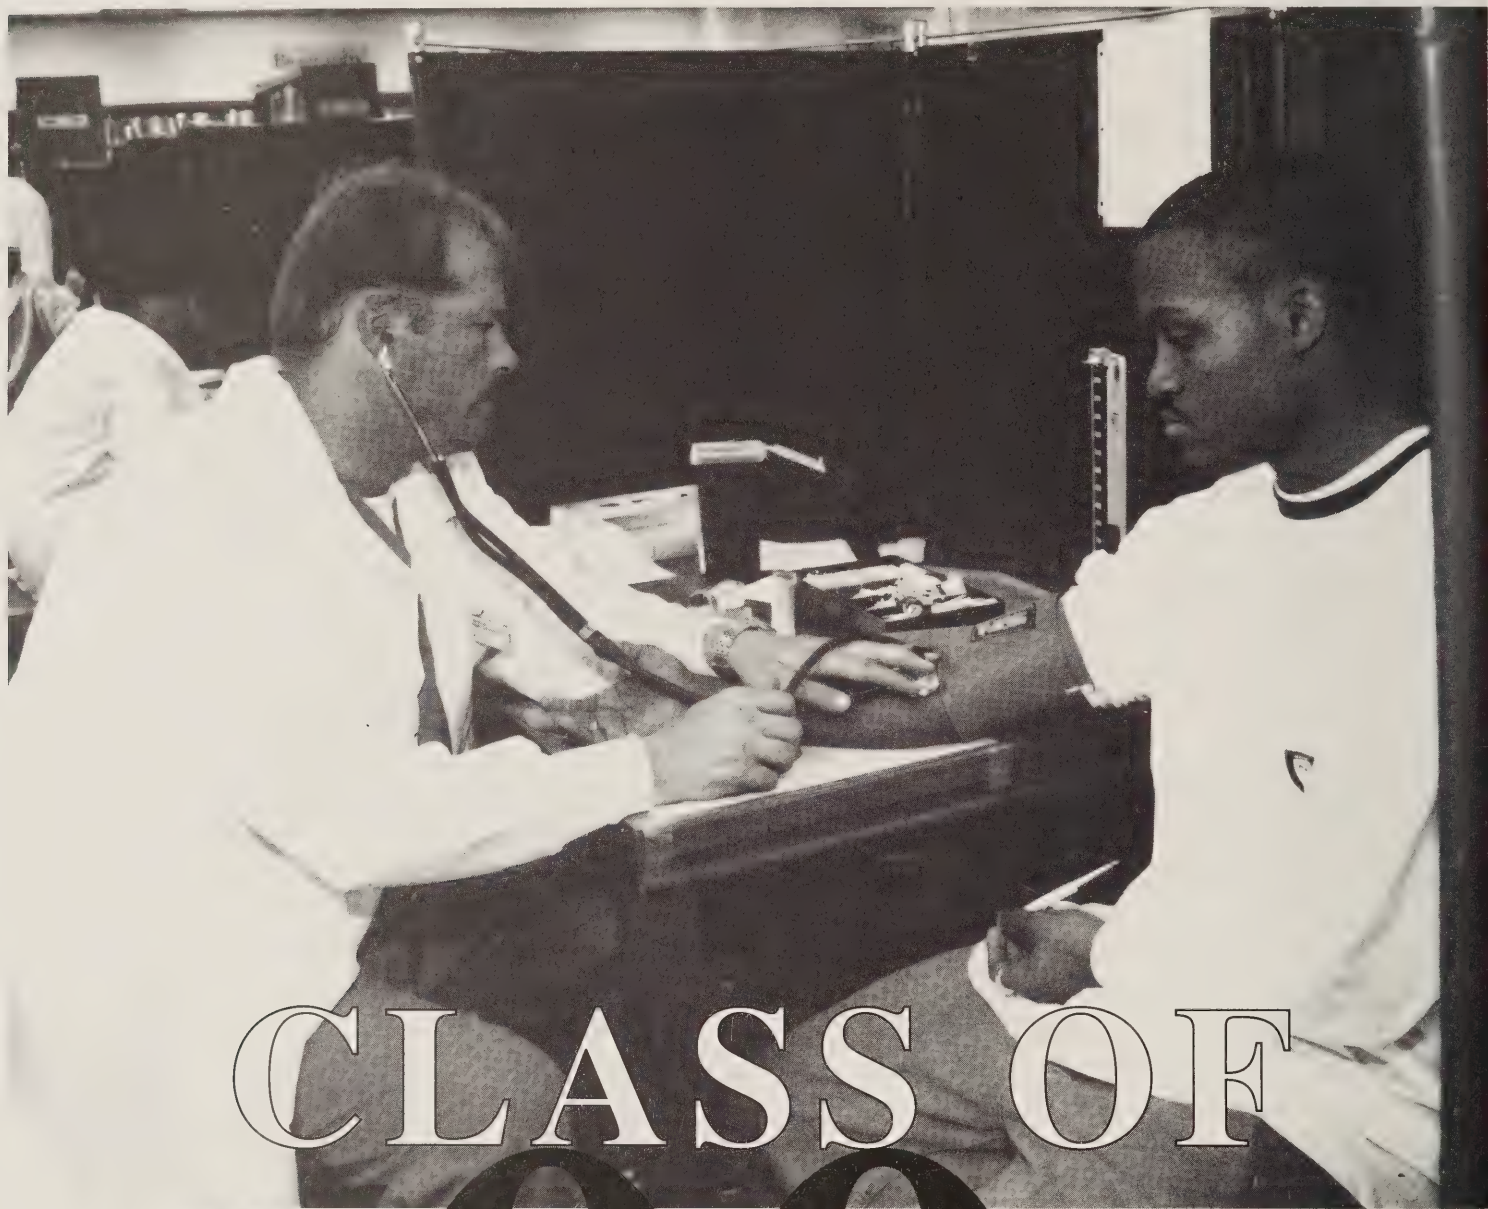

Start Digging. Pushed helpless against the cafeteria table, Katie Loving, receives a wedgie from sophomore friends, Alex Clark, Amanda Patrick, and Katherine Stennett. Wedgies are an uncomfortable thing to have and are a pain to dig out.

Saving it for Later. With great difficulty, Connie Bowling carelessly tries to consume her strawberry yogurt. Matt Spears finds it hard not to laugh when a spoonful of the yogurt ends up on her face.

characters." Henry David Thoreau

Congratulations to the class of 2000! The end of the year had been anticipated by the senior class since September. The last year of high school had been filled with college applications, senioritis, deadlines, and the overwhelming question, "Who's doing what this weekend?" Between going to school, after-school activities, and work, seniors looked forward to weekends of relaxation and the occasional party.

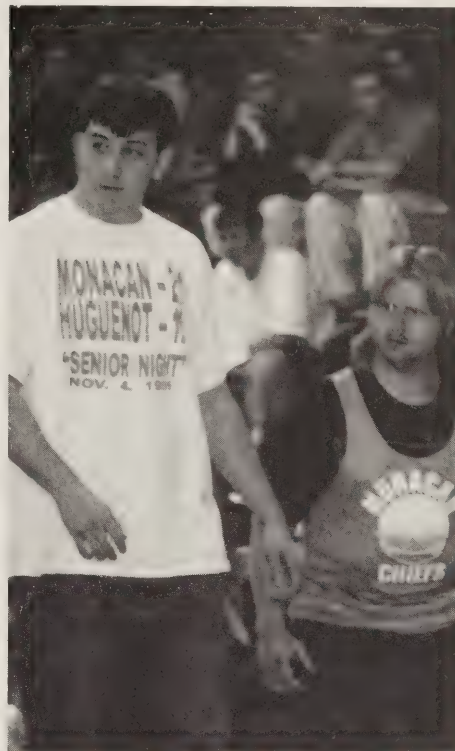

As graduation day quickly approached, new boundaries were crossed and new experiences were had. No one knew where they would end up. Some might be going on to find the cure for an illness, some to the moon, others to become teachers, and others to become high powered industrialists. Who knew?

The graduating class had grown not only intellectually, but also personally. From the beginning, seniors had been recognized with events celebrating their status - senior convocation, senior picnic, senior banquet, senior teach day, baccalaureate, and graduation.

So, as the saying goes, "The future's what we make of it."

- Lauren Gallaher
and Patricia Pineda

"Let's Go Get the Ball." Showing Ricky Vann where to go, Kevin Mapp volunteers to help out with MOMD basketball. Seniors proved to be big help to Ms. Molsky and Ms. Spader.

"Don't Worry! They Don't Bite." After dissecting their shark, Kelly Harvey, Allison Stevens, Jennifer Burns, and Brooke Martin proudly display their work. Being a senior provided opportunities to take different classes such as vertebrate anatomy.

Time for a Break. Seniors use their bunch time not only to eat, but also to relax and catch up with their friends. At lunchtime, seniors got the privilege of leaving class three minutes early to get in line first.

This Box is Heavy. Using his muscles, Ben Arner helps the teachers transport boxes of food for the Christmas Mother to the waiting vans.

Recognition

Senior Convocation Honors Seniors

“When Al and John asked me to speak to the class, the conflicting emotions of honor and fear brought tears to my eyes. I wanted to say something memorable, but feared I had nothing of worth to say. ”

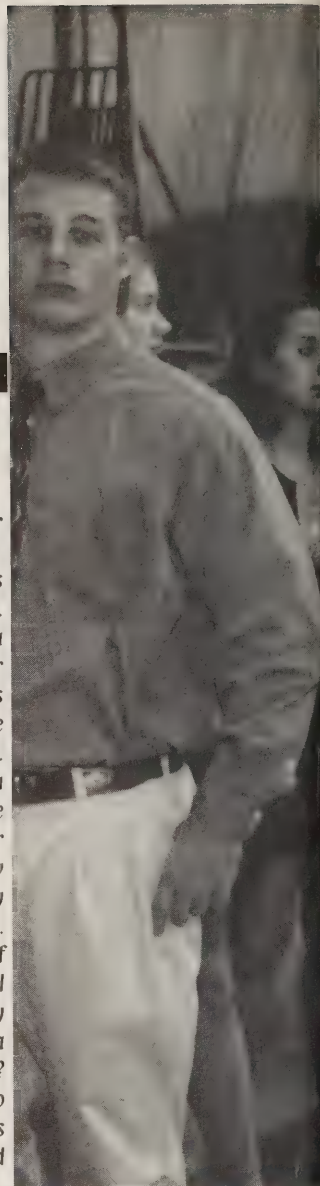

Mrs. McGrath gave a speech at the Senior Convocation on October 12, 1999. Her speech was one of the best ever heard at Convocation...

“As you know introductions are difficult to compose. Speech writing books often tell us to begin with a witty remark or joke to get the audience’s attention. But I always confuse the punch line, so a joke is not an option for me. As a teacher, I frequently begin class with a warning: ‘You will be responsible for the information presented.’ Those of you who know me from hours spent in this theater have heard me start with ‘Perfect practice makes perfect.’ Will there be a test today? Will your performance be judged? The answer is yes and no. Today you won’t leave waiting for reviews of your performances, nor will you see a grade from a written test. But I do have a challenge to offer. You are the class of 2000, the millennium class, the first of the 21st century! What are your options? You might think of the last three years as your introduction and now you have reached the most important part of your time here at Monacan. By virtue of your status as seniors you are the leaders of Monacan High School. Where you lead others will follow. My challenge is for you to be leaders of strong character not to be the Y2K problems we keep hearing about. General Norman Schwarzkopf said, ‘Leadership is a potent combination of strategy and character. But if you must be with one, be without strategy.’ Think for a moment. Does a good leader come to love the power and misuses the position? Does a good leader lose sight of the goals? Does a good leader fail to listen to the advice of the experienced? Obviously, the answer to all three questions is NO! But what is character and how do we show character? Chesterfield County Schools have defined four values that determine character: respect, responsibility, accountability and honesty. Powerful words, yet they contrast with vivid images of terrifying events in America’s schools. What causes crisis? Who can help? Who can stop the tragedy? You can. You can help when you practice the values because ‘Perfect practice makes perfect.’ Think about your actions in the last few weeks. What did you say to that freshman who got in your way? What did you say about that teacher who gave that amazingly complex assignment? What about yourself? What do you think about yourself? We show respect by being kind, caring, appreciative and accepting of differences, by being courteous and polite, by judging all people on their merits, by respecting the rights of individuals, and by showing respect. Did you give your best on the playing field? Or did you say ‘Oh well’? Did you keep trying to get that math problem right or was it just too easy to put the book away and go for a drive? Responsibility is the quality of being dependable, reliable, trustworthy; of knowing you alone make the choices; of being diligent, not quitting, and giving your best. Did you blame the computer or the printer when you didn’t take time to do the paper? Did you put someone else in danger because your decisions were reckless? Accountability means accepting responsibility of consequences of your choices, thinking before you act, never making excuses or blaming others, and always setting a good example. What have you done? Did you ‘borrow’ some answers on that current events quiz? Did you go along with the group because it was easier? To show honesty, we tell the truth and act sincerely; refrain from lying, cheating or stealing; we resist social pressure and never, never betray a trust. What have you done recently? Student leaders, whether recognized with title or not, enjoy benefits in their positions. They receive accolades, admiration, privileges, and personal sense of accomplishment. Almost 40 years ago the late President John F. Kennedy said, ‘It is time for a new generation of leadership to cope with the new challenges and opportunities of our world. For those to whom much is given much is also required.’ Leadership is power, which can be used for good or evil purposes. The easiest path is often the road to evil. Yet much is required of you. The choice is yours. When you came into the theater you were given a program and a small card. On the card is the image of an Egyptian scarab. In the year 2000 B.C. the scarab was the symbol of self-creation. Put this card in your wallet so when you reach for your money you will remember the choices you make define your character. What character will you create for yourself? Choose to make a safer Monacan. Opt for the good choices not the easy choices. Create a perfect you. Monacan strength resides in the character of those people who walk its halls. The conclusion of this test of self-creation comes at graduation. I am the last teacher you pass on your way to your diploma. Will you avoid me and say ‘I was a Y2K problem who weakened Monacan and the class of 2000.’ Or will you look me in the eye and say ‘I followed the scarab across the sky and held up the sun.’”

-Alexandria McGrath

“Quick, How Do I Look?” Entering the auditorium in twos, students Darren Bowens and Shauntelle Dandridge take a quick deep breath before walking to sit down. Students were allowed to pick a partner to walk in and leave with during the ceremony.

"Can We Go Yet?" Starting to get impatient, senior Jason Fears can't wait to get moving. Before making the grand entrance into the auditorium students were lined up two by two in the gym.

"Ummmm..." Delivering a great speech Mrs. Hinton recognizes the class of 2000 in her introduction. Mrs. Hinton established senior convocation last year; it was enjoyed by so many that it has become an annual tradition.

Senior Leaders. Senior class officers Al Arrington, John Feeny, Kelly Harvey, Katie Healy, Amy Carter and Connie Boehling presented and announced guests and speakers during the program. The officers along with the senior class advisor, Mrs. Sarah Mansfield, ran the Senior Advisory Council (SAC) and keep order for the senior class.

What's This? Examining her senior class gift, Jessica Lumsden discovers that it is a gold keychain. Every year students are presented with a small token of remembrance.

Top 5 Places to Go During Beach Week

The last bell of the last day of your last year has just rung. The diplomas have been handed out and you're finally free. Now, what do you do? Hitting the sand of local beaches seems to be the most popular answer. Each year, seniors take off for a week of fun in the sun to celebrate the end of their high school career. Which beach? Seniors tell their top five choices...

1. Myrtle Beach
2. Nags Head
3. Daytona Beach
4. The Bahamas
5. Virginia Beach

Story Written by Caycee Goad
and RYANNE MCCARRAHER

Watching the Sunset! Rachael Marble and boyfriend Randy Early are on the ocean at Outer Banks, N.C.

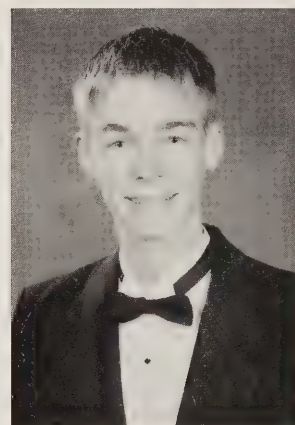

Basking in the Sun! Allison Ballos and Allison Stevens work on their tans on the deck of their beach house at Nagshead, NC.

The Stress of Applying for College

The stress of applying to colleges becomes harder year after year. Picking a college can be easy but getting in is the hard part. Applying to a college creates stress from writing essays to waiting for letters of recommendation. It can make students crazy as they wait for the decision to come in the mail. When it finally arrives students open the envelope with anticipation and fear. When they feel the joy to see that they got in, they realize it was worth all the hard work.

What Song Best Describes Your Years in High School?

There always seems to be a song for every occasion: birthdays, weddings, graduations and holidays, but what about high school in its entirety? With all of the different styles of music that were around, students had many different answers. From rap, country, and classical to the latest hip-hop sounds, students summarized their high school experiences with many styles of music. For years, people have expressed themselves with music, and over these years, the music changed dramatically. " 'End of the World' has got to be the song to sum up high school for me because it's always on the jukebox. After a while, the song starts to grow on you," explains Rebecca Jones. "Buddy Holly", "Second Round Knockout", "End of the Road" and "Eye of the Tiger" were also songs that students picked to describe their high school careers. Whether listening to classical music while studying or rock songs to pump up for a game, music had a big part in the lives of students.

Being a Freshman Again

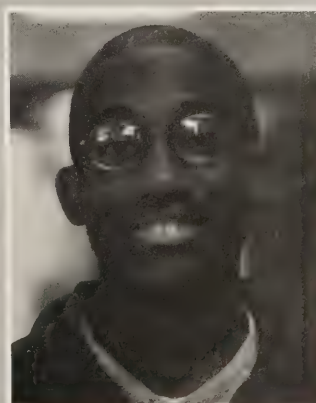

Oh no, not again! It's that word that every one hates: the "F" word. No, not that one. The other one: FRESHMAN. No matter who you were, there had to have been at least one time when you were teased about being a freshman. It's not that being a freshman was that bad, except the friendly reminders from upper classmen to keep you in your place.

Guess what? Here it comes again: the first year of college. Whether going to a big university or a small community college, students shared their expectations and fears about being a freshman again. "Oh, I'm terrified that I'm going to fail miserably and that my parents will disown me," exclaimed Shealyn Gale. "I'm looking forward to it, but I'm not looking forward to the laundry," said Matt Weaver. Though there were mixed feelings about going to college, many students agreed that it was going to be an exciting experience that won't be forgotten. "I'm not scared at all, but I'm really excited. I know the people and the faculty at the school that I'm going to [VCU], so I'm not worried. I feel really comfortable about the whole thing, but like any new experience, I'm a little nervous." With new experiences awaiting, college is just another step towards the future.

Most Important Lesson Learned in High School

High school was a time to learn not only educational material but life lessons. Some seniors shared what lesson they learned.

"I've learned that people can achieve anything they put their minds to." Elisa Anderson

-Tim Irby

"I've learned that true friends are hard to come by, and when you find someone you can truly trust, never let anything come between you two."

-Jennifer Brassfield

Dana Thompson □ "Excuse me, I'm looking for Ray Finkl and a pair of clean shorts." Ace Ventura Tommy Thornton □ "Keep your face to the sunshine and you cannot see the shadow." Helen Keller Brooke Tinsley □ "The best and most beautiful things in the world cannot be seen, nor touched, but are felt in the heart!" Helen Keller Nai Tran □ "Maybe love is letting people be just what they want to be." Howard Jones Beth Trivette □

What They Don't Teach You in High School

Throughout high school, many students have learned that some of life's most important lessons aren't taught in books.

"The most important lesson that I've learned is how to have fun." -Aja Pascual

"I don't think that they can teach you what you need in life to get by and survive." -Red Warren

- Ryanne McCarraher and Courtney Burke

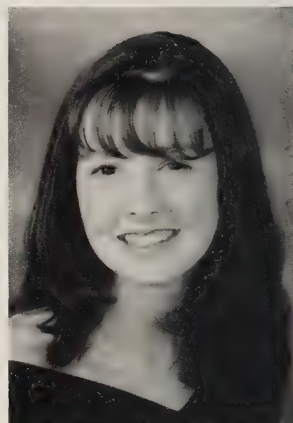

"Survival skills are definitely something they didn't teach me."

CLASS OF 2001

to dare." Howard Arnold Walter

Now we are Juniors...

Becoming a junior means several things. We get to sit in the upper class dining hall and attend prom. This is also the year we receive our class rings, our everlasting symbol of our high school years (or just another piece of jewelry). Anyway, which ever way it's viewed, it is still an important part of our high school memories.

This is the year in which we are allowed to drive to school. Parking for juniors was a big problem this year, but just remember, next year parking is first priority for us as seniors.

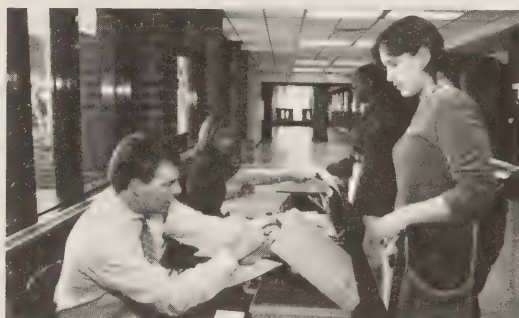

Probably the most important aspect of being a junior is growing up. Now we have reached a point in our lives where a greater responsibility must be taken. We need to start considering the future, whether or not we want to go to college, and what we want to do with the rest of our lives. This year is the preparation for the most important time in our high school career - our senior year. Though all that "real world" stuff is scary, we are still in high school and we should take advantage of the time we have to be kids and have fun. Being a junior has its advantages and disadvantages but it ultimately leads up to what we've spent years waiting for...

-Ashley Zapach
Junior Class President

"Need a Shave?" Trying hard not to laugh, Amber Petrohovich and Jackie Urbank perform their skit in Latin class. Dressing up for a class project often will enhance one's grade.

"Here We Come." Riding in a white convertible during the parade, junior princesses, Kim Corrada and Kelly Maynard, smile at the fans as they pass the football field. Riding in convertibles as chariots has become a tradition for the princesses during the parade.

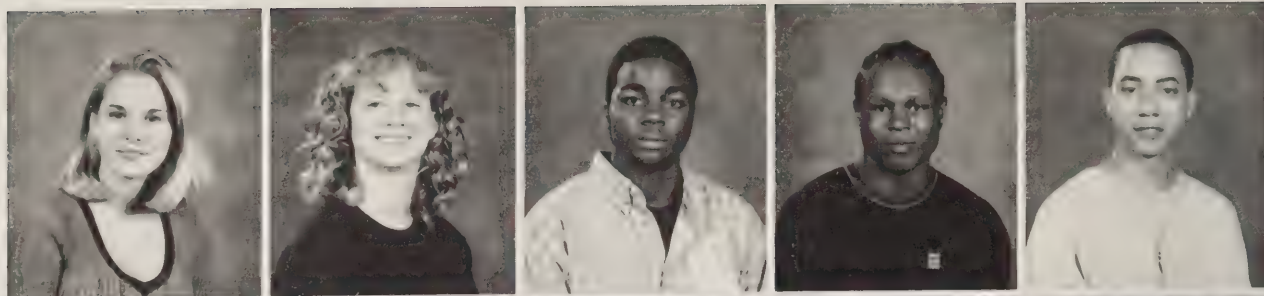

"It's About Time!" As the Jostens' representative finds her class ring, Lauren Horbal anxiously waits to see what it looks like. Rings were ordered in the spring of the sophomore year but not received until the fall of the junior year.

"Mmm...Good." Munching on her potato chips, Danielle White socializes with her friends during lunch. Now in their third year of school, juniors have gotten to know everyone in their class and have made most of their friends.

Express Yourself

Did That Hurt? Junior Chad Davis had his eyebrow pierced on the urban streets of New York.

"Who's Your Daddy?" Senior Jeremy Dillon shows off his vine of thorns. Tattoos such as this one were very popular among teenagers and young adults.

ZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZZ.....As the drill slowly beat into Carol Lesniak's back, her closest friends looked on. "Is she crying.....is that normal....tell me if she looks like she's going to pass out.....how much longer?" Comments like these were heard at East End Demographics that fateful night. Upon each step in the grueling process, Reverend Bob, the tattoo artist, explained exactly what was going on and what could be done to minimize the discomfort.

Becoming a teenager brought many important decisions to be made. New found freedoms and new decisions, such as the privilege to decide to pierce or tattoo one's body, came along. Why did so many teenagers decide to do this? As far as piercing goes, teenagers feel it was a unique way to express individuality, and at the same time, it was not permanent. Popular pierced parts include the earlobe, cartilage, eyebrow, tongue, and belly button. It was very important to keep the area clean. A specialist from Enigma commented that because people wanted to show off their new piercing, they tended to touch it, causing infection.

A tattoo was a way to show dedication to something, such as faith, a significant other, or just to have something new and different. Carol Lesniak commented, "I wanted to do something exciting that would make me remember my senior year." Tattoos and piercings were private personal choices that helped to show off creativity and individuality, but it was important to do this safely.

Hand-Me-Downs

Though it was time for seniors to move on to bigger and better things, before departing, they generously gleaned a few helpful hints from their vast stores of knowledge to share with those left behind.

"Apply early to college. Don't wait until the last minute like me."
- Brian Rust

"Do all your homework because it helps in being exempt from exams."
-Leslie Ramos

"Register early for SATs so you get the location you want."
-Erin Walker

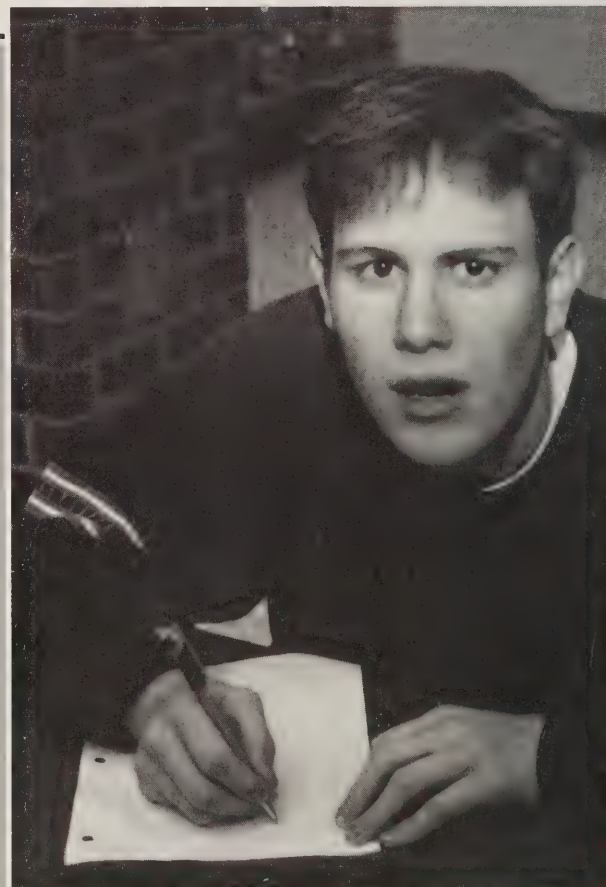

"Make your senior quote as long as possible."
-Josh Savilisky

"Always put a system in every car you buy."
-Ben Arner

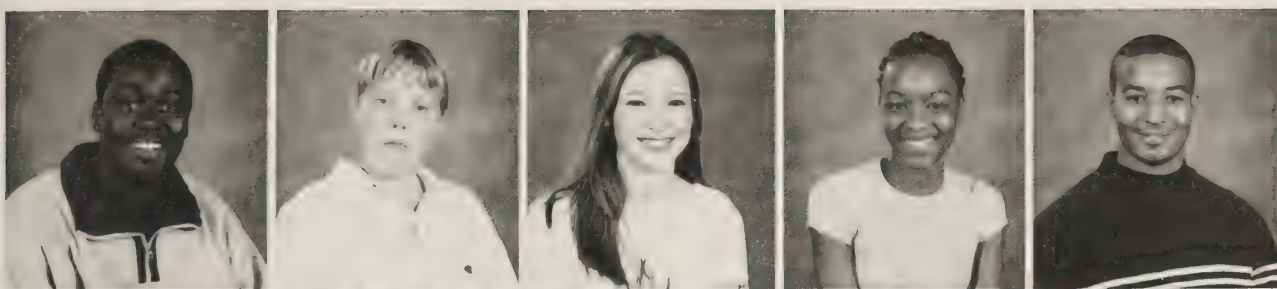

"Take slack classes because it makes it easier to be exempt."
-Rachel Robinson

"Don't bother trying to sell secret elevator passes."
-Danny Lambdin

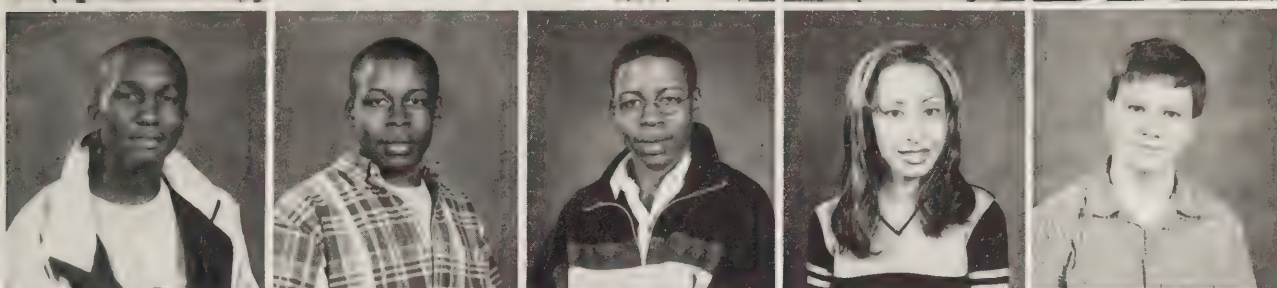

-Katie Anderson

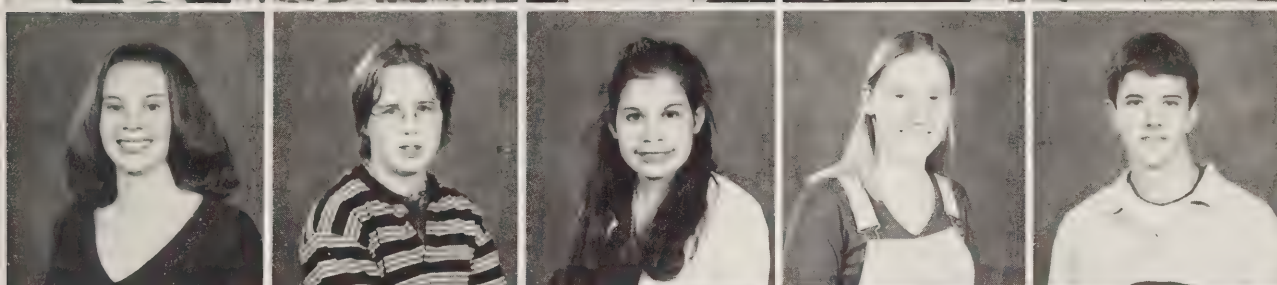

So Much To Do. Senior Brian Rust mulls over application strategies during lunch. Seniors shared some helpful hints to ensure no problems for the class of 2001.

Delectable Dining

One thing on the long list of preparations for prom was choosing the perfect restaurant and getting the reservations for the desired time. The best 10 places to eat dinner before prom were the following:

- | | |
|----------------------------|----------------------|
| 1. Ruth's Chris Steakhouse | 6. Sam Miller's |
| 2. Tobacco Company | 7. None Such Place |
| 3. Frog and the Red Neck | 8. The Berkley Hotel |
| 4. Melting Pot | 9. Bottega Bistro |
| 5. Havana 59 | 10. Olive Garden |

-Sumit Kukreja

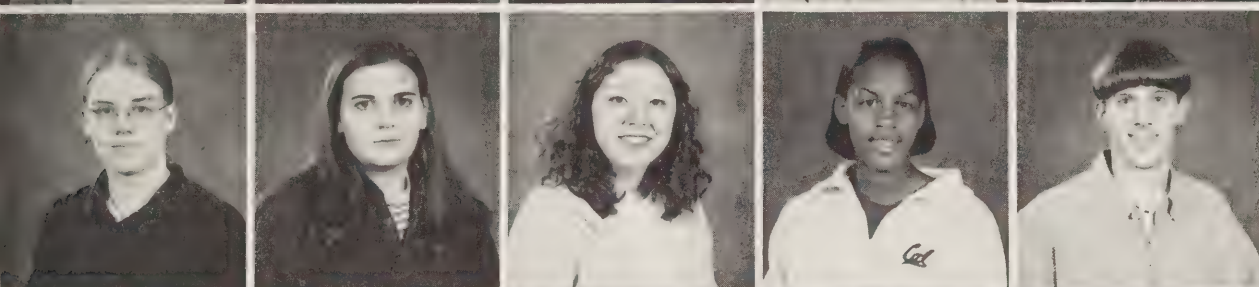

Excellent Etiquette! Making good use of her silverware, Aubrey Beatty threatens her date, Jon Wadkins. Manners were essential when going out to eat, especially at a nice restaurant like the Melting Pot.

Good Morning, Monacan

"What Did You Say?" Speaking clearly over the PA system, seniors Kelly Harvey and Katie Healy announce the day's events. Every day the student body begins their day with a short period of announcements.

"Good morning, students!" The familiar greeting blasted over the PA system in the morning to wake the students up. Morning announcements were a necessity for the awareness of the student body. They kept us informed of the activities, birthdays, and achievements of the students and teachers.

Selected students were chosen to announce the games and special events that go on in the school. This privilege was saved for the seniors who requested it. The announcers spiced up the announcements with catchy phrases, sly comments and the occasional joke. Changing their voices, these seniors put their creativity into the normally boring announcements to keep the student body interested and listening. Junior Laura King commented, "They give the students an idea of what's going on, and they are sometimes really funny." The student body overall enjoyed the daily announcements and, of course, the birthdays. "The announcements were funny but sometimes, a little long," stated junior Krystal Green. However, when a student looked back on a day's exciting events, the day began with a cheerful greeting and ended with bus changes and a "nice afternoon."

What's Under There?

Decisions, decisions, and more decisions. Students were questioned about their preferences on what they wear "under there..." and they answered (anonymously):

1) Boxers, briefs, or boxer briefs?

"Like that's a question! I'll take boxers over tighty-whities any day." -junior, male

2) Where do you buy your underwear?

"at the Price Club. I buy boxers in bulk." -senior, male

3) Cotton, silk, or satin?

"Ew. Who wears silk boxers?" -freshman, male

"Nothing like 100% cotton." -sophomore, female

4) Solids, stripes, or patterns?

"All of the above. Variety is the spice of life." -junior, female

"Grey. All my underwear is grey." -senior, male

5) What about Victoria Secret?

"Waaaay to expensive." -junior, female

"Worth the money." -senior, male

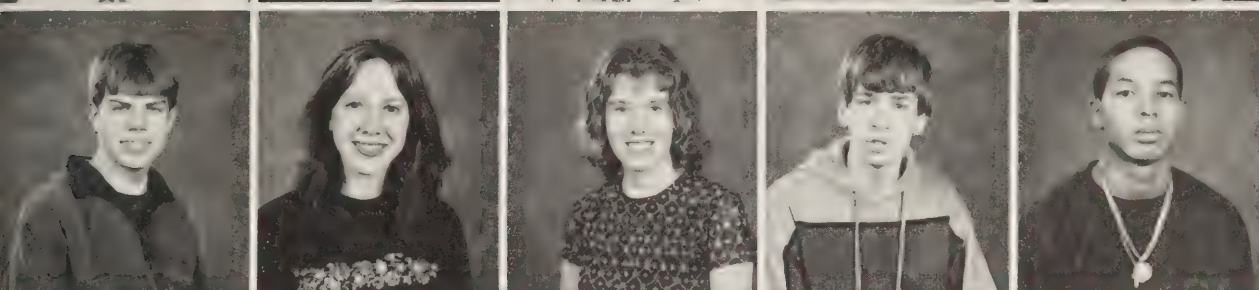

-Tricia Pineda

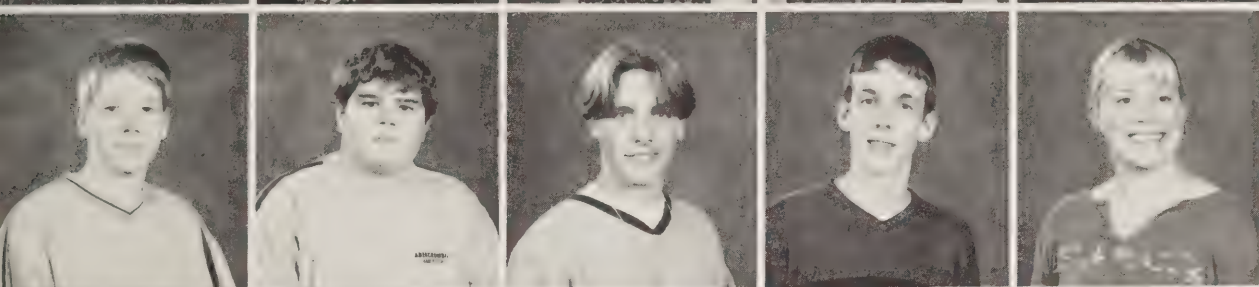

Under where? Plain blue boxer shorts fit the bill for comfort. Nine out of ten guys voted boxers as their underwear fave.

Angel Dust. Readily awaiting the beginning of the Homecoming parade, junior Sara Tokarz feels the excitement of all of the events to come, starting with the float competition to the end of the exciting football game.

Going Down in History

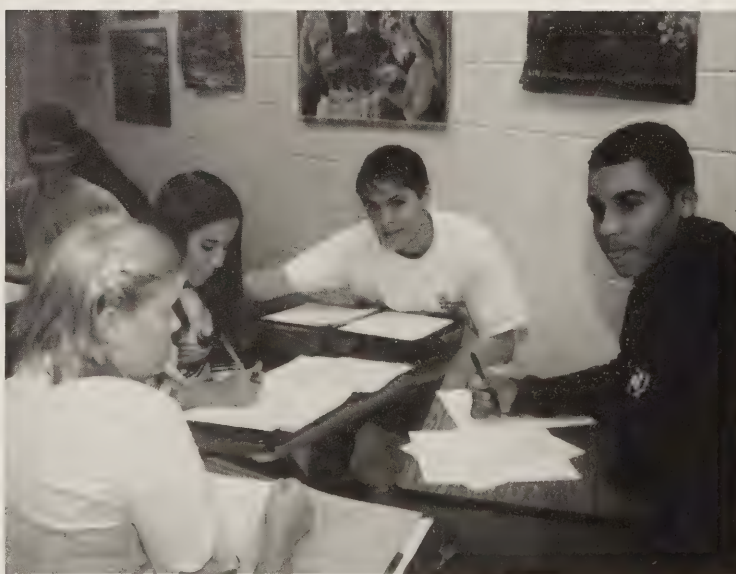

The 20th Century had many influential and memorable people. Each student has his or her own opinion of who the most influential person was. According to the juniors, these were the people of the century:

1. Princess Diana
2. Albert Einstein
3. Martin Luther King Jr.
4. Mother Teresa
5. Marilyn Monroe
6. Michael Jordan
7. John F. Kennedy
8. Harry Truman
9. Rosa Parks
10. Winston Churchill
11. Babe Ruth
12. Anne Frank

-Stephanie Weiler

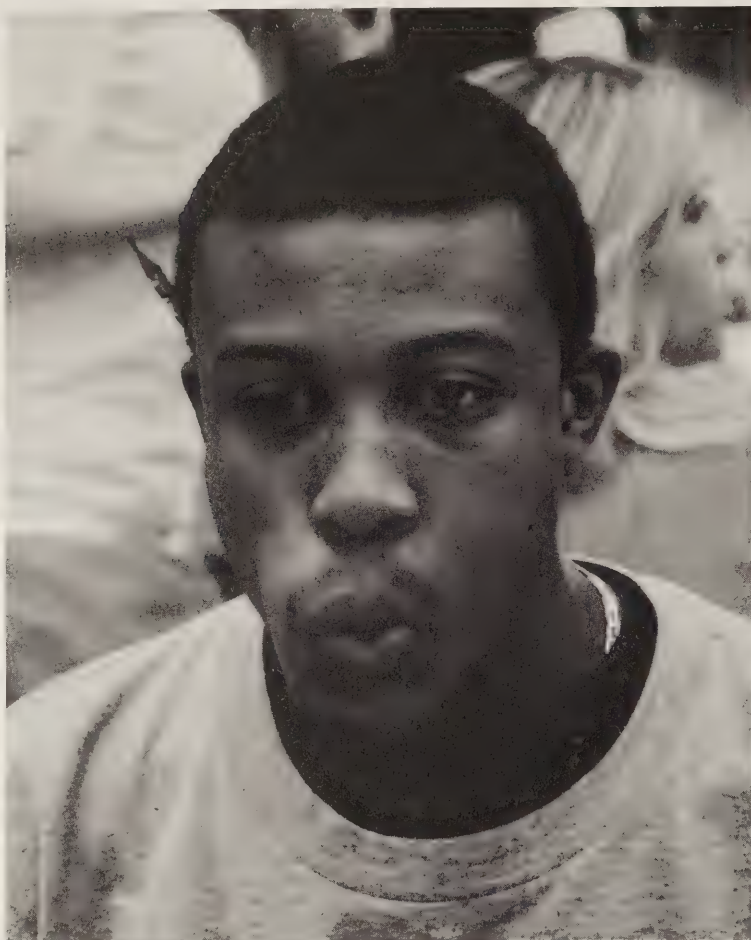

1. "Red Baron" because he set the standards for fighter pilots." -Tim Milligan 2. "John Glen because without him we wouldn't have the space knowledge that we do." - Chris Langgood 3. "Princess Diana because she accomplished great deeds in a short life-time." -Jennings Whiteway 4. "Mother Teresa used her life-time to try to fix and heal the world." - Natalie Ranallo

Group Discussion. In English class, Karen Schantz, Carrie Pearson, Daniel Crowther, and Chad Davis work together on the analysis of a poem. Working in groups often helped break the monotony of ninety minute classes.

Parade Time. Varsity volleyball team members, Robert Fore, Abram Sanson, and Dan McCabe throw candy to the passersby on Smoketree Drive. Many types of clubs and organizations created floats for the Homecoming parade.

"Always chew with your mouth closed." Remembering his manners at lunch, Quincy Taylor makes a good impression. Socializing at lunch was the high point of many students' days.

Big Squeeze! Stopping for a quickembrace, Mekenzie Cox and Ryan Jones grabbed each other for a special moment in front of the camera. Co-ed friendships had become a major part of growing up in high school.

Lead the Way. Being escorted by his mother, Patrick Smith is recognized for his contributions to school. The princes were honored at the Powder Puff game and at the dance.

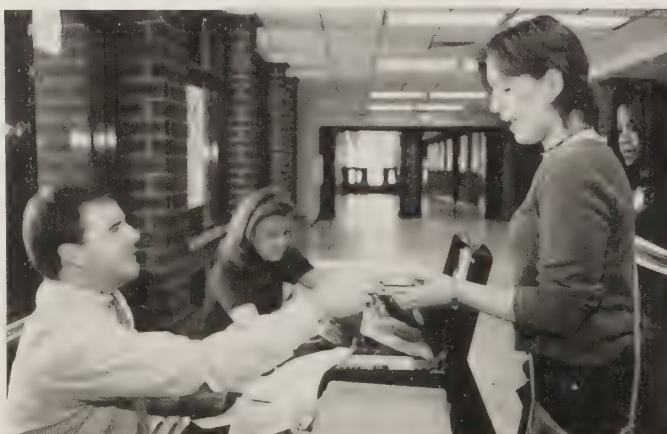

Back in Time. Adorning clothing that was popular two decades ago, Craig Conta sits with his friends at lunch and talks about the hippies he has seen walking around school. Spirit Week was a time for students to express themselves in different ways and get pumped up for the game at the end of the week.

Black Bandits. Pulling out their black clothing for the annual Powder Puff game, juniors Annie Davis, Kim Corrada, Ashley Summerford, and Ashley Barrow use the day to get pumped up for their game against the seniors that night.

"We Say Brown, You Say Orange!" During the pep rally varsity cheerleaders Jennifer Fallin and Sarah Riggs pump up the junior class. Pep rallies were a successful way to get the football team and the crowd hyped for the upcoming game.

"Toga Time" Presenting a project in Latin class, Amber Petrahovich and Jackie Urbanek showed that they know how to "do as the Romans do". Being creative and going the extra mile often helped students earn good grades on projects.

Bong, Bong. During the half-time show of the football game, Shawn Wyckoff and Kelly Wilson play their instruments, while keeping up with their band leader.

Down to the Last Hundreth. During Chemistry class, Kelly Sorrells weighs a metal rod. Accuracy in measurement was of the utmost importance when completing a lab assignment.

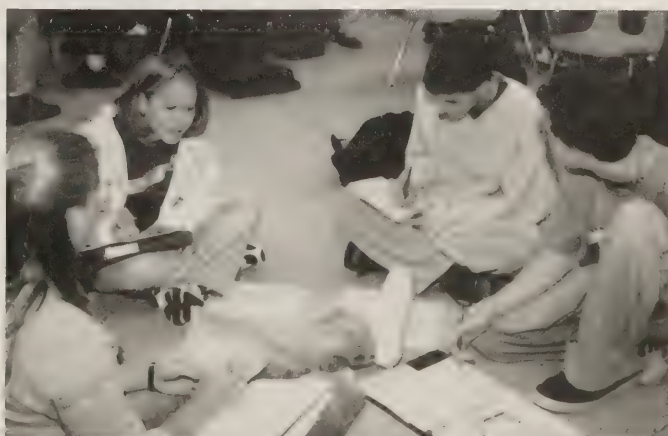

Poison Ivy. Junior Sarah Skimin took on the character of Poison Ivy for the Homecoming parade. The Act I Company's float was decorated with various movie characters this year.

Catch This. Sending the ball flying through the air, junior Ralph Brown gets another assist as his teammate catches the pass and puts the ball in the hoop. Recognizing who was open on the court was an important key to winning the game.

"If Lost, Please Return to..." Knowing where they belong, Darlene Noble and Jed Leidheiser proudly wear their T-shirts. Students used spirit week to show off friendships and creativity.

Brain Power. Grouped together on the floor, Meredith Schantz, Becky Seibert, Jonathan Mann, and Jeff Arrington work together on an assignment. Combining the thoughts of numerous students was a beneficial way of learning different subject studies.

“The only fence against the world is a

thorough knowledge of it." John Locke

What is it like to be a sophomore? One of the best aspects of being a sophomore is that sophomores are no longer at the bottom of the totem pole. They no longer have to worry about where a class is or who to eat lunch with.

Yet, sophomores still have their problems. Even though they know how everything works, they still have to adjust to new people, classes, and teachers. Sophomores have not yet reached upper class status, and they are somewhat stuck in the middle. They have to take the PSAT's and start to think about college. There are more positive than negative aspects to being a sophomore. They finally get to drive which is an exciting experience. The choosing of class rings is another plus for sophomores. During the spring of sophomore year, students can pick out what kind of ring they want and the type of stone. Sophomores also get respect and admiration from freshmen which is always a plus. The pros make it an unforgettable year.

-Brittney Colbert and Katherine Rohman

"That Was So Funny." Before the field hockey game, Katie Harvey catches up on the gossip with an opposing player. This is Katie's second year on the JV team.

"They're Twins!" Wearing the same outfit, Alison Twedt and Katie Ralcewicz sit together at lunch talking about their plans for Homecoming. No longer do the sophomores get teased for being a freshman, however, they still cannot sit in the upper class commons.

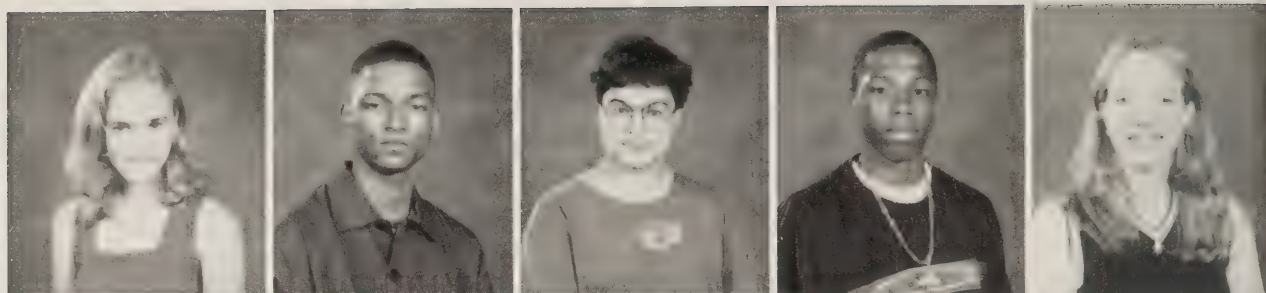

"Go, #65." Filling her lungs with air, Renee Foltz cheers the football team on to victory. As a sophomore, Foltz made the junior varsity cheerleading squad.

"What's the Next Dance?" Waiting for the music to begin, sophomores Ashley Holdren and Ashley Millham review the choreography for the next routine. Besides school, practice for these dancers take up much time out of their day.

Sweet ~ Sixteen

What makes sixteen sweet? As Ashley Hodren and Karly Coleman said, "You get your license." Big deal. It's just a plastic card with a bad picture on it. But, it represented freedom. With that little plastic card, students were able to stop waiting for a ride and to go wherever they needed to be. To do that, students needed a car, and many had to save the money to buy one. This wasn't easy. As Melinda Arner said, "It's hard to save your money when you want to spend it on other things. The saving was worth it, though, because when students finally got the license and the car, boy, was it sweet."

Freedom was sweet, but as many students soon realized, it was bittersweet. Suddenly, a new driver needed to have extra money for car insurance, gas, and repairs. As the bills mounted up, many students had to get jobs. But, at least, they could drive to work. Underestimating the word responsibility, sixteen-year olds only can come to one conclusion, becoming the big 1-6 only led to bittersweet happiness.

Double Duty

As sophomores, many students got their first job. This was a privilege because they got money. The biggest privilege was having the extra cash to go to the movies, buy new clothes, and eat fast food. "It was good to get the money but a pain to work," contributed Katherine Schuster.

Having a job could also be intimidating. It taught students how to manage time and what it was like to be in the real world. Many had a job only in the summer, so they wouldn't have too many things to do at once. Others chose to work during the school year and found out how much responsibility was involved. "My grades dropped when I got a job because I got home so late and didn't have time for homework," admitted Dan McCabe. There was also a lot of pressure involved trying to balance everything at once. Regardless of the negative aspects, getting a job was always a learning experience and taught students many values.

Off the Rack

It's a lazy afternoon, and there's nothing left to do. Your homework is done, you've already studied your American history, you've mastered your jump-shot, and you could present your communications oral backwards, if necessary. Your egg baby is safe, the dishwasher is emptied, and your bed is made. Now what? All you've got is time...time and some extra cash. What to do, what to do...

The new Austin Powers' flick is out and that amazing CD was just released. After looking in the mirror, you think you could do with a new haircut too. Actually, your entire reflection isn't up to par: your boots are a little worn, your underwear's a little itchy, your jeans are a little out of style and, look at that ratty sweatshirt! Now that you're thinking about it, isn't it your Mom's birthday, too? And if little sis doesn't get that millenium Beanie Baby soon, you can forget peace and quiet.

Is the answer coming to you yet? I'll give you a hint: you can buy everything you need there and have some fun too. That's right. The mall--an American institution. I know what you're thinking: "The mall? Gross. No one ever goes to the mall!" Think again, smarty. Don't tell me you don't go because we have seen you. Every true teenager has gone to the mall and goes on a regular basis. When there is "nothing" to do, the mall is the answer.

1. Can't stand waiting in line? Don't want you be late for class? Have you ever thought of how many bathrooms there really were in the school? 2. What was the title of that book again? Searching the library could take a long time because of the vast number of books on the shelves. 3. Hungry? Why wait? Eat one of the many pizzas sold each day.

Useless Facts

- The cafeteria cooked 34 pizzas a day: 8 chesse and 26 pepperoni.
- There were 432 trophies total in the trophy cases.
- Midlothian High School kidnapped and buried our wooden Indian chief under the field goals on our football field.
- Looking for a good book? There were 18,500 books in the library.
- 2,500 cokes were sold per day from the coke machines.
- When students were deciding where to sit in the cafeteria, they had 648 seats to choose from.
- Students and teachers had their pick of 94 bathroom stalls.
- Can't find your locker? Just use one of the 2000 the school had to offer.
- Shadow people lurking in the commons! Watch out for all 15.
- Murder at Monacan! When a dead egg baby was found, Officer Meadows outlined the baby in chalk and took forensic pictures for later analysis.
- Sorry Sophomores. There were only 479 parking spaces for juniors and seniors.

Old Fashioned Values

Since the 50's, and even before, strong values have been at the heart of every home. Whether it was spending time with family, doing well in school, or attending church, America has come to embrace those traditional values that stand the test of time.

"Saying grace before dinner."

- Zach Wadsworth

"Spending the holidays with relatives I can't stand."

- Natalie Ranallo

"Eating dinner with my family; it's a tradition."

- Matt Macey

"Enjoying yourself."

- Jennings Whiteway
-Ashley Haygood

"Crazy, sassy, cool." Certainly illustrating an American value, Erica Woodson, Tamika Hunt, and Shari Grey bust out at the Homecoming dance and prove they know how to enjoy themselves.

Where's the Road? The absence of headlights while driving prepares for a crazy experience. Janine Auberger commented, "Since we had the morning class, my partner forgot to turn on the lights and drove on the other side of the road." Some students in behind-the-wheel had the pleasure of driving before school, unlike others who could drive after school.

Student Driver Disasters

During the sophomore year, students usually enroll in behind the wheel. The class lasted for approximately seven days with an hour and thirty minutes each day. After forty-five minutes the students switch positions.

While driving, many incidents occurred since this was a new learning experience for almost everyone. Students contributed some of their experiences:

"The instructor told my partner to go left and without realizing she went right instead."
-Mekenzie Cox

"While I was taking behind the wheel...I failed three times."
-Puja Mujerkee

"My partner stopped the car on a hill and got out without putting it in park, so the car started rolling."

Going Down in History

The 20th Century had many influential and memorable people. Each student had his or her own opinion of who the most influential person was. According to the sophomores, these were the people of the century:

1. Mrs. Worley
2. Pamela Anderson
3. Mother Teresa
4. Princess Diana
5. Babe Ruth
6. Martin Luther King, Jr.
7. FDR
8. Bill Gates
9. Mickey Mantle
10. Christopher Reeves
11. Marilyn Monroe
12. Stonewall Jackson
13. Robert E. Lee

Rock - A - Bye Baby. After finishing their lunch, Judy Morgan and Stacy Mann play with an egg baby. The egg babies were a project for sociology class and were a lesson in responsibility.

"Number 1!" Bundled up, sophomore Chelsea Higgs cheers for her team during a football game. The cheerleaders had to sustain the cold weather while they chanted for their boys.

An Apple a Day. Sophomores Josh Thomas and Steven Bartos share a laugh during lunchtime. Lunchtime offered a break from the daily schoolschedule.

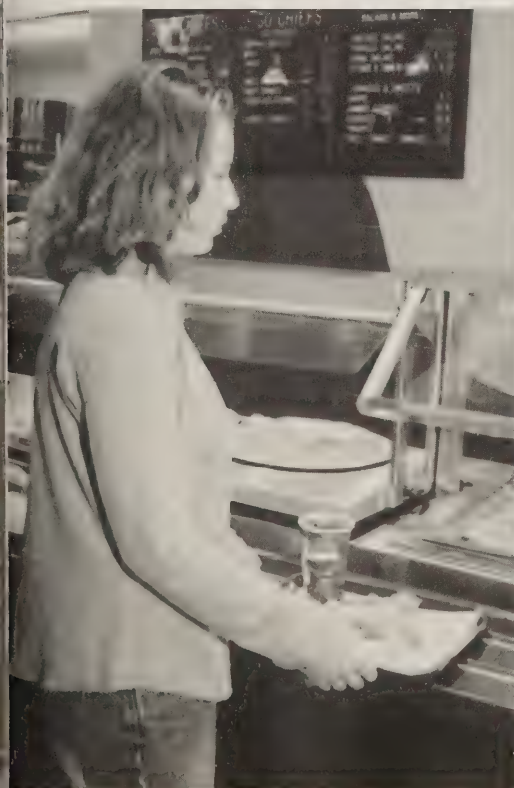

"Go JV." Kicker for the varsity team, sophomore Joey Fore, attends a junior varsity game to cheer on his fellow classmates and future varsity teammates. Support from the varsity team urged the younger players to play their hardest to earn a spot on the team next year.

All smiles. Sophomore princess, Alicia Chavis, and her date, Deimon Collins, walk down the aisle formed by students. Applause and cheers greeted the Homecoming court.

"Take a Load Off." Sitting the bench for the rotation, sophomore Zach Pennington takes a much needed breather before continuing on with the game. The hard work during the season led to a winning season.

Decisions, Decisions. Looking over the various food choices, Holly Baruffalo waits in the lunch line to pay for her meal. Pizza and french fries were the most common foods purchased for lunch.

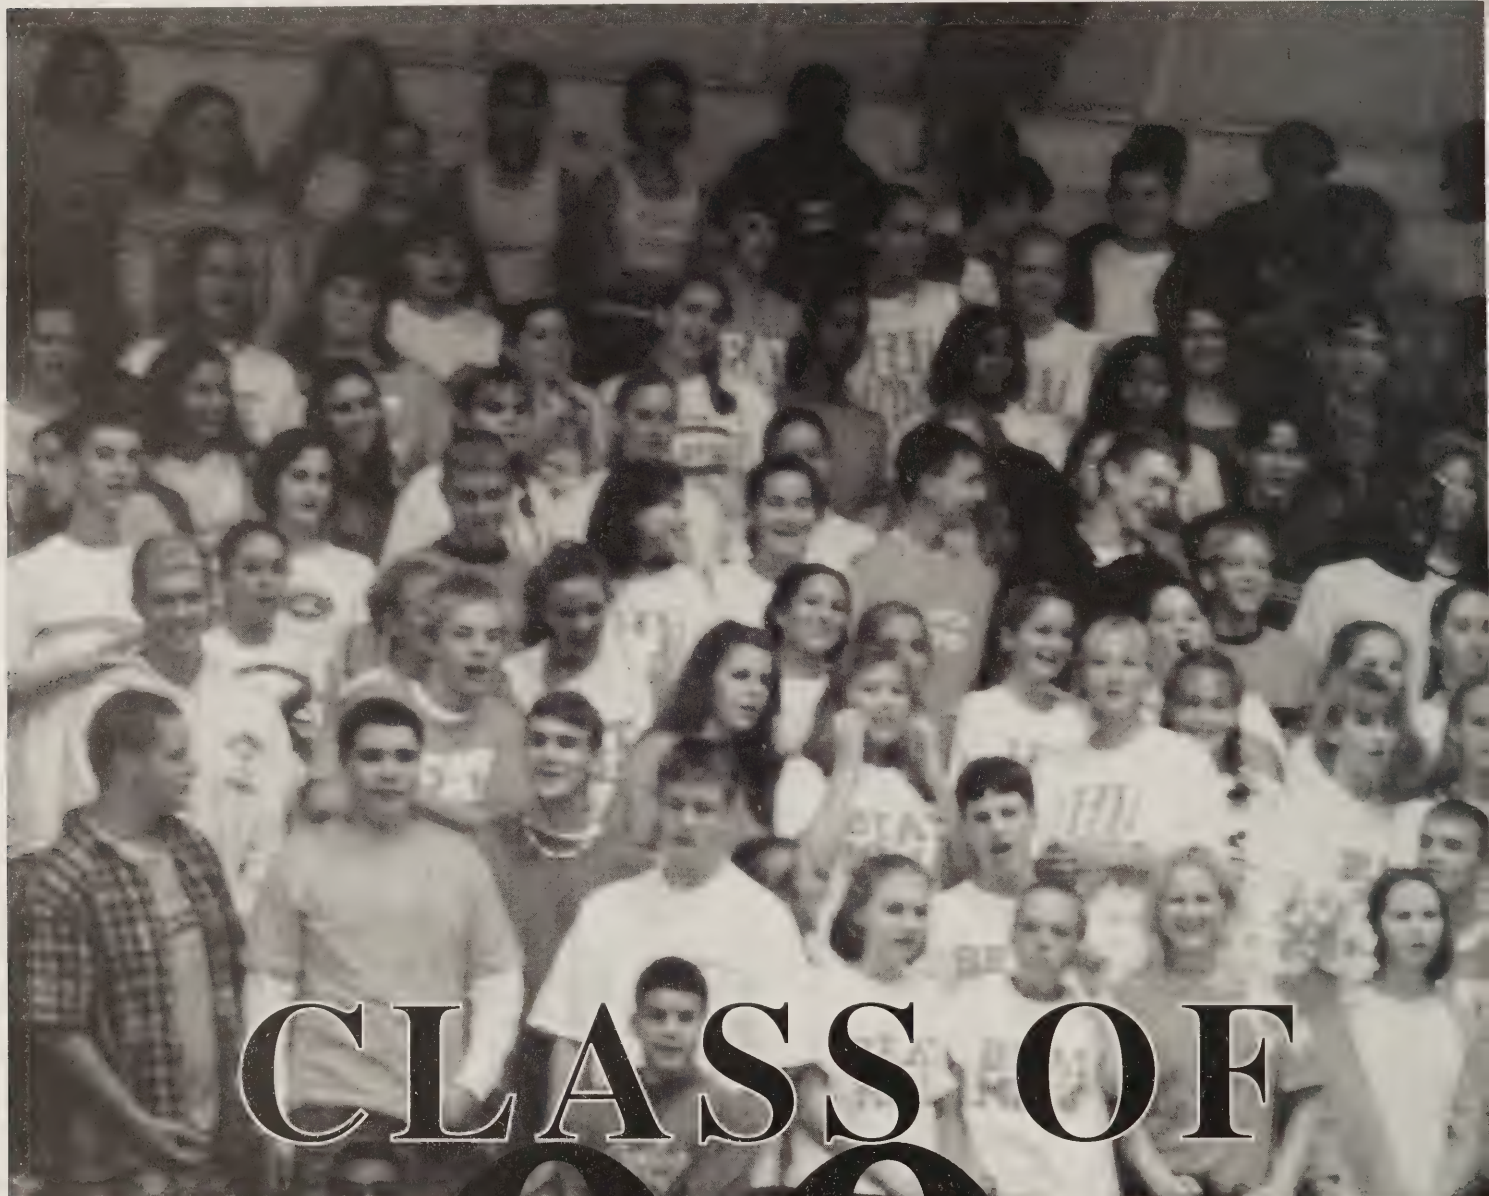

Playing Hard. Stretching to reach the ball, Katherine Stennett fights for possession to keep the ball going toward their goal. Hard work and dedication was demonstrated continuously by the varsity field hockey team.

Strike a Pose. Cruella Devile? No, it's Meredith Dillard dressed up for the Homecoming parade. Looking on with poise, style, and confidence, she is sure her float will win.

have done it." Ralph Waldo Emerson

Starting high school was a new and different experience for freshmen. Their first year at Monacan was the beginning of a transitional period to prepare students for college. They entered a world foreign to them with "new faces" said Brittany Fernala and "longer class periods" added Allie Moore. Never before had they been in a school so large where so many different things went on at so many different times. The first couple of days of school made freshmen feel as if they were caught in a whirlwind, leaving them a bit overwhelmed. Whitney Stout remarked that being a freshman felt "like you were a small fish in a big pond."

A big difference for the ninth graders was the opportunity for each of them to become involved in student activities. More clubs, sports, and organizations than any of the freshman could ever imagine were now available for them to become a part of. The first year of high school was the beginning of a natural maturing process where the students began to learn responsibility, dependability, and time management. These qualities were not fully incorporated into their lives yet, but freshmen had a better understanding of the kind of people they would need to become in order to mature into young adults after they entered high school.

-Desiree Beatty

Get It, Get It, Got It! Lunging, Allie Moore stretches for control of the ball. Moore is a strong player and also one of the few freshmen on the varsity field hockey team.

Lunchtime Fun! Eating their lunches together, Lisa Spears and Erin Tenquist enjoy a break from class. The underclass commons is the eating grounds for first year students.

Prim and Proper. Patiently awaiting the start of the Homecoming parade, freshmen princesses Kelsie Bradberry and Monica Boehling are transfixed by the sights around them. The parade was exciting for freshmen who were experiencing it for the first time.

Chow Time. Freshmen experience the bustle of short lunch periods during the beginning of the school year. Shorter lunch times and crowded tables are all too familiar to students

Heard It Through the Grapevine. Freshman Kaitlyn Pickering takes a break during the Homecoming dance to chat it up with a friend. When the sexes weren't busy battling, talking was something they could both agree on.

He Said, She Said

Guys and gals offered up their thoughts on the mysteries of the opposite sex. the males:

1.) Why do women go to the restroom in groups?

"That's where they hold their secret meetings and plan to dominate the world, making men their love slaves--and that's okay with me." ~Matt Sullivan

2.) Why don't women ever have anything to wear?

4.) Why can't women drive?

"Despite hair color, deep down they're all blond." ~Walter Vermilya and the ladies...

1.) Why can't men share their feelings?

"They don't have any." ~Shannon Klan

2.) Why don't men listen?

"If they listen, they may have to respond and they don't know the answers." ~Jennifer Kurbel

3.) Why can't men ask for directions?

"Because they think they know everything." ~Megan Tuttle

5.) Why can't men commit?

Hittin' the Snooze

Sleep is a condition of rest for the body and mind at regular times, at which the eyes stay closed and there is dreaming. When sleeping, the body regenerates and repairs itself. If the body does not get enough rest, it cannot repair and the immune system cannot function properly, leaving the body exhausted and stressed. Sleep was essential to a student's health and also to his or her education. Do Monacan students get enough sleep? Tee Lassiter said, "I think we do not get enough sleep. We have to get up too early; we should have more time." Sleep was an important thing, if not the most important thing needed throughout the high school years.

Sometimes homework for students was overwhelming causing students to stay up late hours. Morgan Hyde stated, "My teachers pack me with so much homework, I need my sleep to rest my body and mind." Sleep deprivation made it harder to learn, but at times, it was necessary for success.

Ring.....Ring.....

The telephone was a major part of students' lives. Many spent more time on the phone than they do on homework. Some had their own line, and others used the family line. Many parents get irritated with their children because they were always on the phone. Freshman Dan Acker said, "My parents are always yelling at me to get off the phone!" Other freshmen, Daryll Simms and Will Shipstedt thought, "The phone was a good way to get to know guys and girls better."

To some freshman, it was so important to have a social life and start off their high school career right, they forgot about everything else they needed to do. Others found time to keep up with their work as well as their social lives. Either way, the phone was a social lifeline for freshman. Without a phone, freshmen would not meet as many people, and others wouldn't be able to keep in touch with their friends and make plans with them.

The Cheese Wagon

To the freshmen, riding the bus was a punishment. Winter days produced cold and uncomfortably hard seats, while summer weather caused the natural reaction of bottoms sticking to plastic seats. Shenteirio Bennett agreed by saying, "I think the bus is ridiculous; it's so cold on the way to school." The bus had, over the years, acquired the nickname, "the big yellow cheese". To most freshmen, the bus was lame and embarrassing. Nick Bryant said, "I don't like the bus because it's stupid, slow, and it takes a lot of time to get to school." Riding the bus could be considered an inconvenience. Not only did students have to wake up earlier for their bumpy ride to school, but they had to stand outside in the cold, rain, and humidity waiting for it. Inconvenient or not, however, it was a dependable ride to school. It was a guarantee that students would arrive at school safely and on time.

-Timothy Irby

"The Wheels on the Bus..." Stepping onto the bus, Ashley Johnson heads for home after another day of classes. Buses were a good source of transportation, even though students would rather not experience it.

It's All in the Numbers. Freshman Nick Bryant stares deep into "207," praying he has found his 5th period class. During the first few days of school, freshmen could be found staring helplessly at room numbers with hopes of finding the right one.

Freshmen Frenzy

The lower class commons was filled with unfamiliar faces from a variety of middle schools. Odd days, even days, and 90 minute classes took time to get used to. Kaden Feller commented, "In the beginning, it was hard to remember which classes to go to and when the homework was due." During class, freshmen watched the clock tick wondering when it would end. Melissa Chester explained, "Classes were boring but I got used to being in class for an hour and a half." Even though class dragged on, students liked the block schedule with only four classes a day.

With a little time to adapt to a new year, Jediah Jones stated, "I feel scheduling was one of the better things coming here as a freshman." One of the best things about the block schedule was the extra time to complete homework. Melinda Schwartz remarked, "It really wasn't that hard to adjust. It was nice to have more time to do homework." Some students took a while to figure out the new schedule and some learned quickly, but in the end, everyone got used to it.

Going Down in History

The 20th Century had many influential and memorable people. Each student has his own opinion of who the most influential person was.

According to the freshmen, these were the people of the century:

- | | |
|----------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. Mother Theresa | 5. John Lennon |
| 2. Princess Diana | 6. Christopher Reeves |
| 3. Martin Luther King, Jr. | |
| 4. Henry Ford | -Katherine Rohman |

1. "Mother Theresa was a good humanitarian and she helped people." -GinaGluck, Jessica Williams, Lexi Huvar 2. "Princess Di was a good influence." -Kelsie Bradberry 3. "Henry Ford invented the first affordable car." -Kyle Doeblar 4. "Martin Luther King Jr. knew how to treat others." -Sally Courtois ping! Freshman Rachel Nania follows through her attack with a strong pass that secured a point in her favor. A strong, hard pass was key to winning a match.

"Get Hyped!" Shouting with their cheerleaders, the freshman class experiences their first pep rally. This event preceded their first Homecoming weekend.

Dancin' Around. At the Homecoming dance, freshman princess, Monica Boehling and Mark Zachary get down to the beat of the music. This night was one to remember.

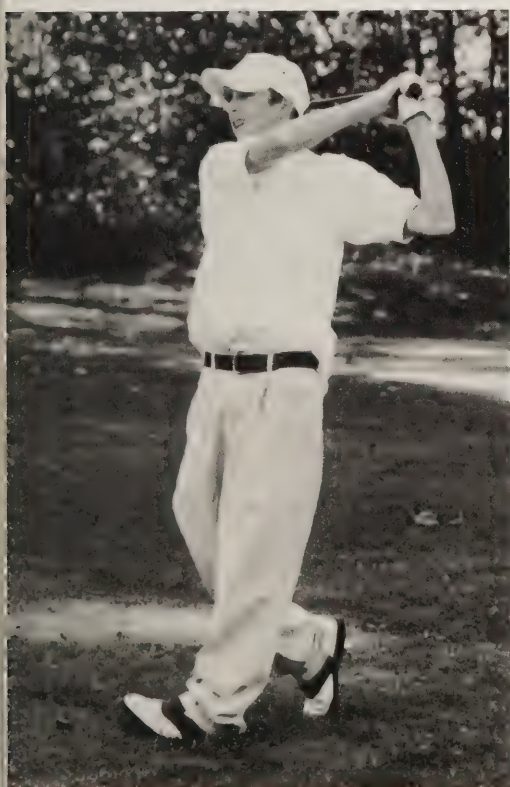

"Gettin' Over the Net." To start the game off, freshman Aaron Smith sent the ball over the net to his opponents. He served with accuracy and precision to get the ace and the point.

One up. Racing for victory, Allie Moore withholds the lead over her Skyhawk opponent. Relay races involved teamwork and dedication from each runner.

"Down, Down, Down the Court!" Members of the freshman cheerleading squad chant to victory during the basketball game. The freshman cheerleading team was established during the fall, so the girls had an introductory year before JV cheerleading tryouts.

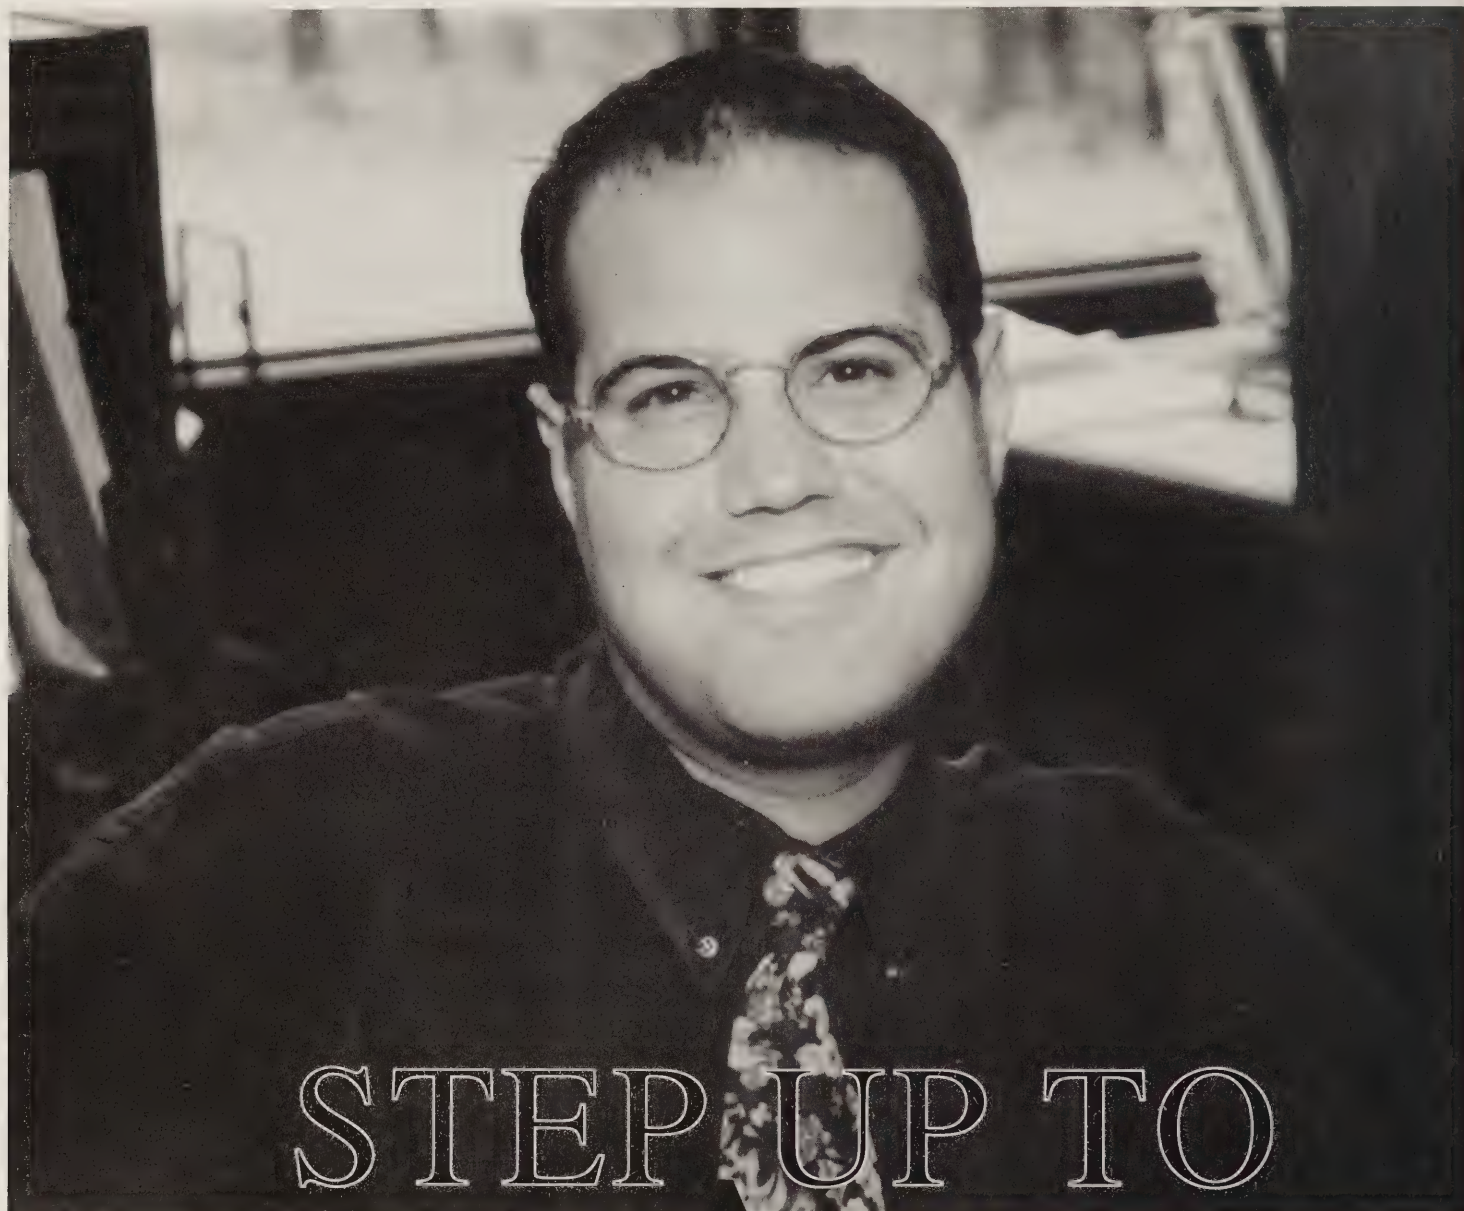

Lunchtime Fun. Freshman Candace Valentine and Latoya Peace share a hug with sophomore Shawn Johnson. It never took long for freshmen to make friends with the older students.

impossible takes a little longer.” Anonymous

High school was a huge leap in life that must be taken one step at a time. At this stage, a transition must be made from being the dependent middle schooler to a mature, independent college student. Without teachers, it was impossible for this leap to be successfully made.

During freshmen year, teachers must adapt their students to the rigor of high school. The classes and expectations were much harder than those of middle school. In tenth grade, the teachers made the curriculum more difficult, and they expected more from their students. The physical education teachers took on an important role, for they taught driver's education and ultimately decided if sophomores began driving or not. By junior year, students were finally adapted to high school and therefore ready to prepare for college. Teachers made more of an emphasis on the importance of preparing for the SAT's, and English teachers began introducing timed writings into the curriculum. Teachers' roles of preparing students for college was the largest during senior year. English teachers helped students with their dreaded college essays to make them sound just right. Other teachers took on extra classes, so students could take AP classes. These teachers paralled their classes to college classes in order to give students an idea of how college classes are run. Teachers were extremely important in helping students move onto their next step of life.

Caught Red-Handed. Dazed and confused, Mr. Waters is pinned up on the lockers by junior Jimmy Whitehead. Mr. Waters was an awesome addition to the school's faculty last year.

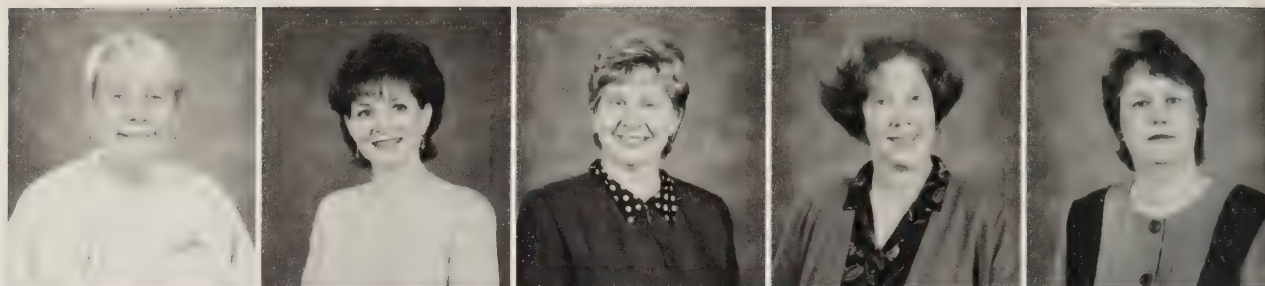

Pretty in Pink. Dressed in magenta shirts and blank pants for twin day, these quadruplets, Laurie Pettis, Terri Tizard, Peggy Sutton, and Vicki Marshall, do it in style. The office staff often participated in Spirit Week to show school spirit.

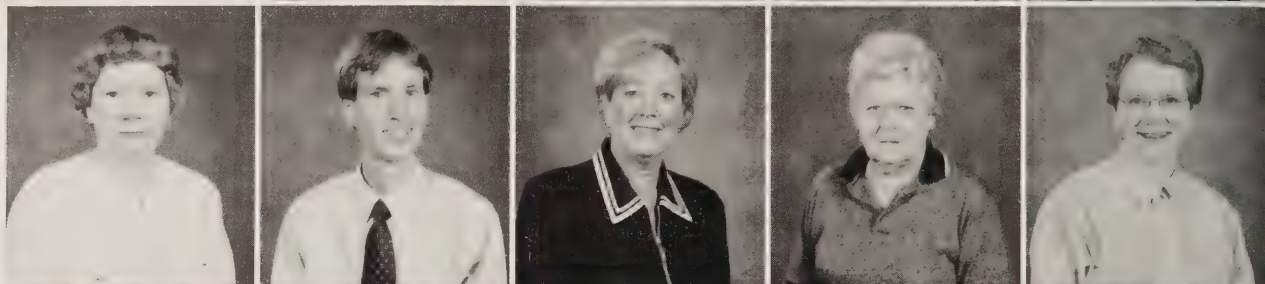

“Mmmm...mmm...good.” Taking time to relax while enjoying a football game, Deborah Hinton, David Sovine, and Sloan Burns sip hot chocolate. Administrators often attend sporting events to show support for the team.

“Hold It ,Boys!” Striking a pose, the football coaching staff stops to show us their manly stance. The coaching staff is a crucial part of our faculty during the sports' season.

When I Was Your Age.....

Teachers and parents were always trying to bestow words of wisdom on college bound teenagers. What to do and what not to do was explained. Trusting what they said should have been easy since they had been there, even if their age made it unbelievable. Below, the oh-so-wise faculty enlightened the seniors with a few morsels of wisdom.

"Get involved with at least one activity where you are helping others. VOLUNTEER - it feels good."

-Mr. Glover

"Don't skip class-it costs too much!"

-Ms. Sameth

"Your work load will double or triple. Get an organizer and budget your time."

-Mrs. Colwell

"When studying your major or deciding upon one, be sure to do some work, co-op, or interning with that major so you don't end up with a degree that is useless."

-Ms. McGrath

Hey, Coach!

Teachers had an already busy schedule with all of their classes and students, but throwing a sports team into the mix makes life a little more crazy. "Being a coach is a lot of work, but also a lot of fun. It gives me a chance to interact with students in a way outside of the normal student teacher relationship," explained the wrestling coach, Mr. Tuzzo. Though it required an awful lot of extra work and time, many members of the teaching staff have chosen to take on the extra responsibility of coaching. Teaching outside of the classroom, coaches use that time with students not only to teach them the game, but also lessons and values that will last a lifetime. "I've wanted to become a teacher and a coach since I was in high school. Though things become hectic during the season, the opportunity to work in a non-academic setting and being able to instill values such as commitment, hard work, cooperation, responsibility, and team work makes it worthwhile," said the girls' basketball coach, Natalie White. Though they may not know it, coaches were the heart of the team, and it couldn't be done without them.

-Ryanne McCarraher, Caycee Goad, & Courtney Burke

Balancing Act. Even though it can be hard keeping up with both coaching and teaching responsibilities, it's no problem for the girls' basketball coach, Natalie White.

Spending Senior Year Right

Differences of opinions sprung up as the topic of senior year arose. Teachers held their own opinions and expressed their ideas about how a senior year should be spent. Working hard, hardly working, or a little of both became the norm for seniors and their last year of high school. This was what the teachers had to say regarding seniors:

"Continue to work hard throughout your senior year, and also enjoy it. You won't get to go back and repeat it. Recognize the hard work you have put in. Appreciate the teachers you have here, and thank them." -Mrs. Hinton

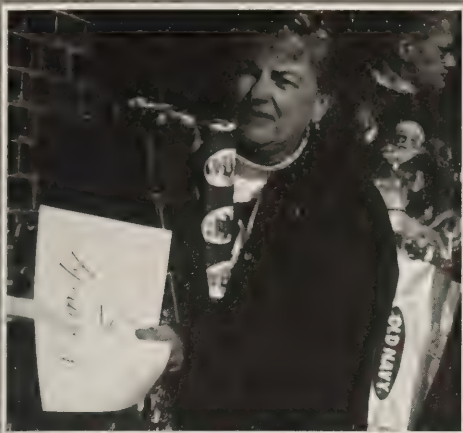

"I hope seniors will work hard their senior year, because otherwise college will be a big shock." -Ms. Driscoll

"Don't skip class-it costs too much! Don't do your reading and papers at the last minute." -Ms. Sameth

-Ashley Haygood and Stephanie Weiler

Senior Year Silliness. Seniors Amy Carter and Brooke Martin joke around at lunch. The last year of high school was a chance to kick back, relax, and goof off.

Listen Up. During Convocation, Mrs. Deborah Hinton speaks out to the Class of 2000 about their responsibilities as seniors. Convocation occurred in the beginning of the school year to recognize the seniors.

A Time to Give. With her arms full, Mrs. Raynes carries out gifts for the Christmas families. Every year, Mrs. Raynes organized the Christmas families for each group and club.

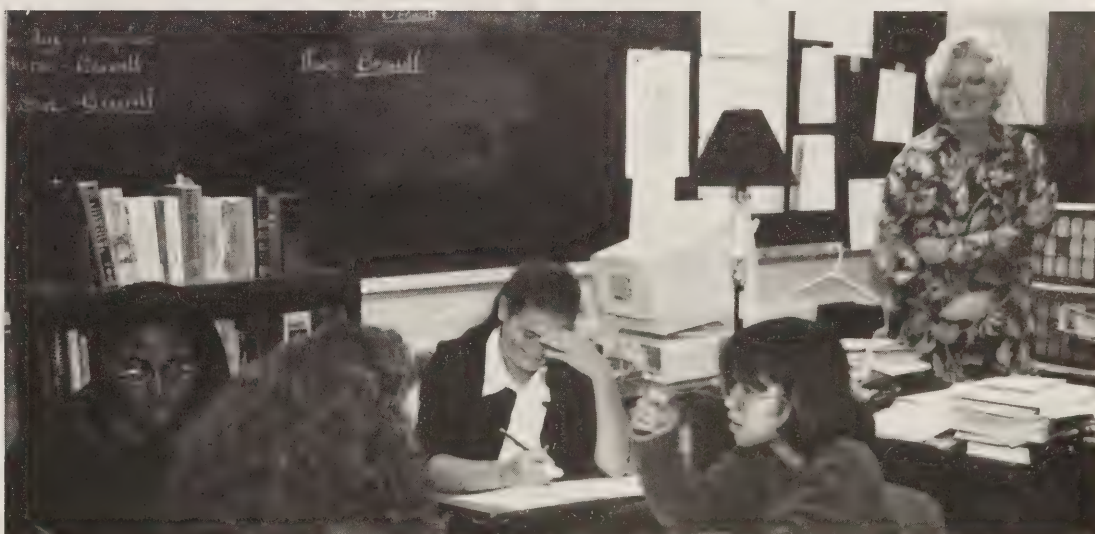

"Come On, Guys!" With a look of intensity, Coach Bruce Henthorn watches his basketball team play. Coach Henthorn's intensity was seen in the hard work his team put forth in practice and games.

Tennis Time. Away from the direct action, Coach Thackston watches his tennis girls in action. Being a supportive coach reflected positively in the way athletes perform.

An Afternoon of Hard Work. Lending a helping hand, Coach Keith Daniels loads gifts for the Christmas families into the back of the car. Loading and delivering the Christmas family gifts requires help from many people.

Good Work. With a smile on her face, Ms. Alexandria McGrath watches over the work her students are completing. Ms. McGrath worked hard to prepare her juniors for their last year of high school.

Contemplation. During a field hockey huddle, Coach Natalie White ponders over what to tell her team. Coach White contributes not only her time to teaching but also to coaching JV field hockey and Varsity girls' basketball.

Beware of rashness, but with energy and sleepless vigilance

"I Don't Think So!" Clutching the ball under his arm, Jarren Thompson wards off his opponent with his other arm as he runs the ball down the field. Football was on most people's minds during the fall, whether they played or watched the games on Friday nights.

Stepping Up To The COMPETITION

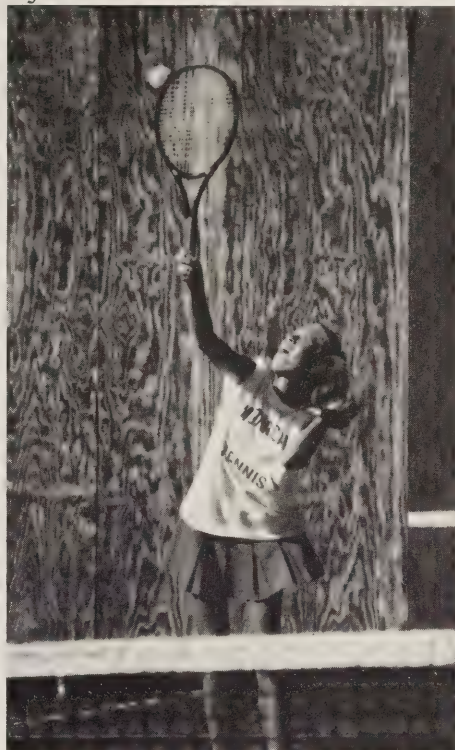

go forward and give us victories. - Abraham Lincoln

The green grass with freshly painted white lines stretched out for 100 yards. The black pavement, carefully divided into lanes, loomed straight ahead until the path gently curved back around to the starting line. The newly waxed hardwood floors reflected images as the light shined down.

No matter what the sport, all athletes have a playing field, whether it is a football field, basketball court, cross country trail, track, or soccer field. On that first day of tryouts or practice, athletes must come ready to work. For at least three months, the field takes blood, sweat, and tears, sometimes not giving anything in return. Here, an athlete's dreams come true or are lost forever. The field is the place where athletes can show their true ability, earning them the right to continue playing in college and even the pros. Others have their dreams ruined with broken bones and torn ACL's. Regardless of what happens, for however long an athlete continues to play, his playing field becomes his second home.

-Aubrey Beatty

Stretch. Extending her racket high in the air, Sarah Dierson makes contact with the ball to send it back across the court. The girls spent every afternoon practicing hard on their "playing field."

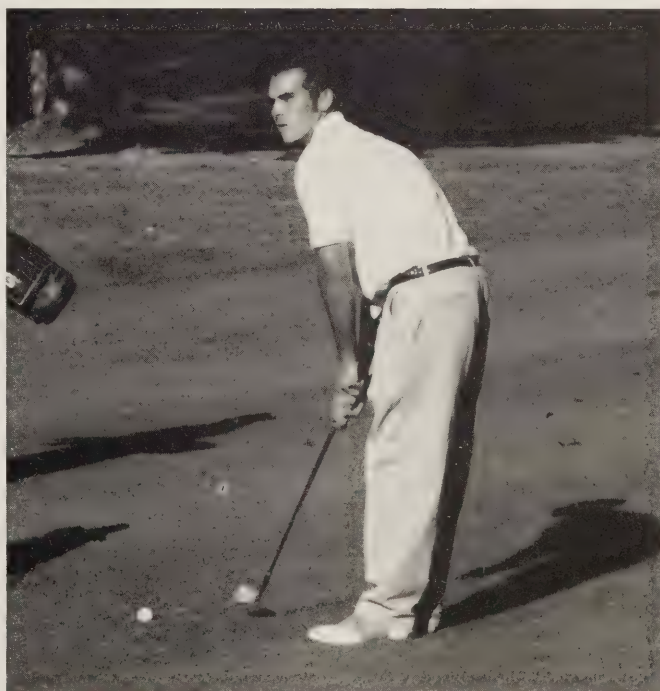

"Gotta' Get to the Goal." Going at a sprint, Jennifer Kurbel maneuvers the ball around her opponents to get the ball down the field. Speed, agility, and aggression were characteristics of the team.

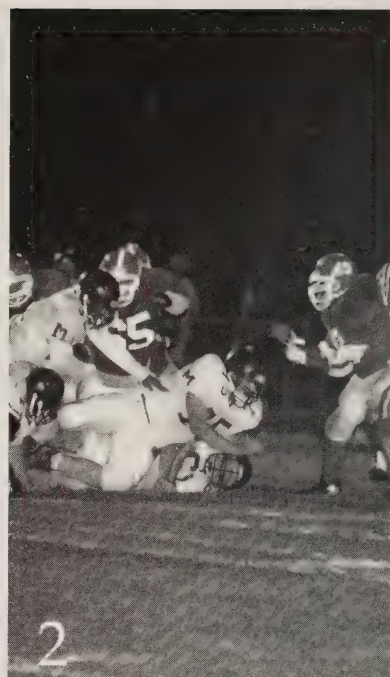

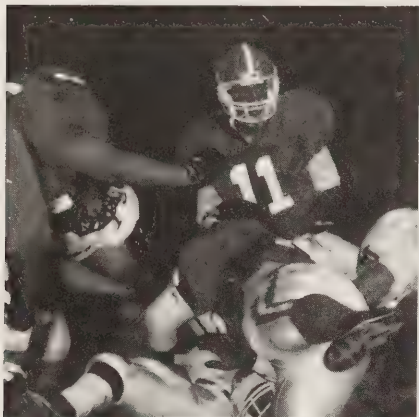

"It's Mine!" With extended forearms, John Feeney begins the bump, set, and spike sequence with a perfect pass. Technique is important in the game of volleyball.

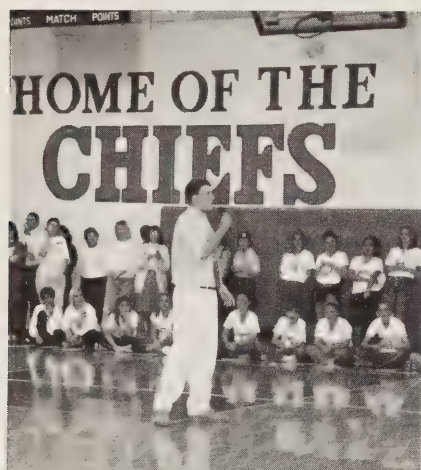

"Can I Make It?" Looking across the green, senior Brandon Moss eyes his target as he prepares to take a swing. Like many athletes, Moss has stuck with the sport since he was a freshman.

"pile On" The chiefs pile hard on Midlothain's Varsity football team to keep them away from quarterback Chad Davis. Protecting the quarterback is very important.

1. Defense, Defense. Blocking their enemy, Chris Seabrook and Kraig Bridy take on the L.C. Byrd opponent.
2. Jump Aboard. The defense swarms the ball, ready to make a fumble recovery if the opportunity arises.
3. Keep Running. Sprinting down the field, Shaun Holiday flies past a Byrd player, leaving him in the dust.
4. Running Hard. Jared Thompson runs hard down the field with an L.C. Byrd player holding on.

"Pumping Up" Speaking to the whole school, Varsity football captain, Kevin Mapp, pumps up the crowd for the Homecoming game later that night. The screaming and yelling fans are important at the games for support.

"I think cleats are, on occasion, good, but when they are not good they are a pain to wear."
-Jeremy Hite

Just another part of the uniform

Cleats are an important part of a football player's attire. They protect player's from slipping and spraining an ankle or knee in bad weather. When the cleats hit the ground, it maximizes leg power because the cleats fit into the ground for better push off. Without cleats, the player would not be as effective.

-Sydney Dannenburg

Look at Those Feet! Cleats are a major part of a football uniform. There are many different kinds, including Nike, Adidas and Reebok.

"One Love"

Every Friday for the first three months of school, the halls were filled with vibrant orange hues. On game day, the school in its entirety got all decked out in its brightest orange attire. Students were seen with their whole faces painted brown and orange and some even decided to dye their hair in honor of the team. Perhaps the most exciting aspect of the sport was the spirit that surrounded it. That spirit is what made football exciting for both the players and the spectators. It made the game fun.

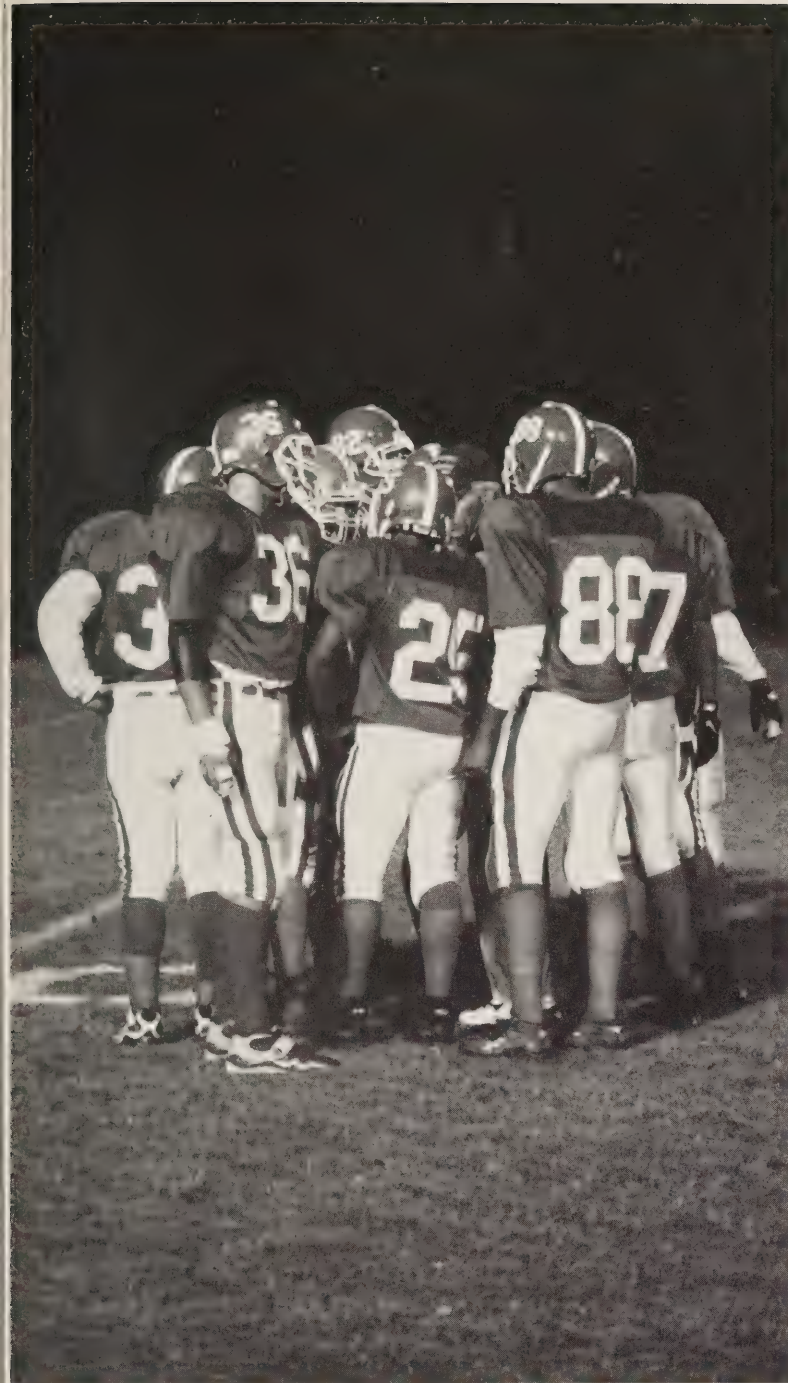

At the homecoming pep rally, the entire school looked on as Captain Kevin Mapp made the school realize why it loves football so much: the team always gives its best effort. We cheered Kevin and the team on at the pep rally and at the game. Our spirit could not be diminished.

The Chiefs ended the season, with an amazing victory, the defeat of, and triumph over, the infamous Huguenot. The seniors had a final victory and so did the school. "All I have to say is we came out strong in the end," said Brandon Chavis.

The season was especially emotional for seniors. Knowing each game was one more closer to the last one they watched, senior students valued the time spent at games. For the past four years, seniors have sat in the cold every Friday. They did not do this for the love of the hot dogs or the cold bleachers, but for the love of the guys playing. They lived and breathed the sport because of their love for the game. But, they weren't the only ones. All of the fans felt the same way and made the game their own. In the halls, in the bleachers, and on the field, all students made the game their own.

-Stacey Walden and Sydney Dannenburg

"Huddle up" The Monacan team converses before each play. The team talks about what is going on in the next play.

Driven By Determination

JV & Freshman Football

Pre-game rituals were essential to playing well during any football game. Players often ate certain foods such as pasta to get their carbohydrates up. Eating carbohydrates and drinking water before and after the games increased performance.

A common ritual was the stretch and warm-up hours before the game. Warming up loosened the tension and calmed the players, preventing serious injury.

It was not surprising to see a player or two praying in hopes of victory. This quiet reflection time allowed the athlete to think about his strategies and focus on the upcoming game. Whatever the pre-game ritual, it helped the guys focus on what they had to do.

Brian Dobbs and Ryan McAllister expressed their determination during the season by saying, "Our desire to win greatly exceeds our fear of loss." Coming together in August for the opening practices, players learned to cooperate and get along as a family. In learning to play together, the team hobbled over a couple of losses, but regained strength. The group had a determination to conquer its opponents and fight its hardest for victory.

Daniel Scott voiced his opinion of the season, "I thought we had a really good season and played exceptionally well, and it showed by being eight and zero." Being beginning athletes, freshman players constantly strive to prove their ability not only to the coaches, but also to themselves. Although being the most junior team could be intimidating, the freshmen rose to the challenge. They ended proudly undefeated.

-Stephanie Weiler & Kelly Wilson

1..., 2..., 3..., KICK! Adding to the immense lead, Jordan Arnold kicks off to Huguenot. He received more action than expected.

"We won our final six games and in the process matured as a team. The players never gave up on themselves and learned the value of hardwork. The team was a success."

Steppin' Into a Player's Mind

Shinguards? Check. Stick? Check. Cleats? Check. Mouthguard? Check. OK, I'm ready to go to tryouts. "Tryouts are one long week of the hardest, vigorous activities you'll ever do in your life," remarked Shawn Wycoff.

"Run two laps and stretch," remarks Coach as my excitement builds. I was told field hockey was a good way to meet new people, and play a physical sport. I hope I make the team!

Five days later...My name is on the list! I can't believe it! My hard work paid off. Tomorrow I will be ready for our first game.

Practice, Practice, Practice...Today at practice, I tried as hard as I could. I sprinted during tag, I concentrated on stick work, and I was aggressive on defense. Practice has made us a talented team ready for our first game.

Game time...Here it is and I'm so nervous I can't focus. I watch as my teammate takes the ball down the field. I see the ball coming to me. I stop it, and look for an open player. I drive it to number eight and she smacks it past the goalie! We can overcome any obstacle.

New players learned and experienced players led. Kathryn Malarkey contributed, "The skill was there along with the strength, but the saying holds true that 'You have to want it to win it.' After the passion was there mid-season, we received our glory." No matter what, the teams always had a positive attitude. "This is an excellent JV team. "We all have good spirits and try our hardest," commented JV captain Cory Klanian.

Setting An Example

What's orange, brown, and white and has the ability to jump, set, spike and dig? Look no further. It's our boys' volleyball teams.

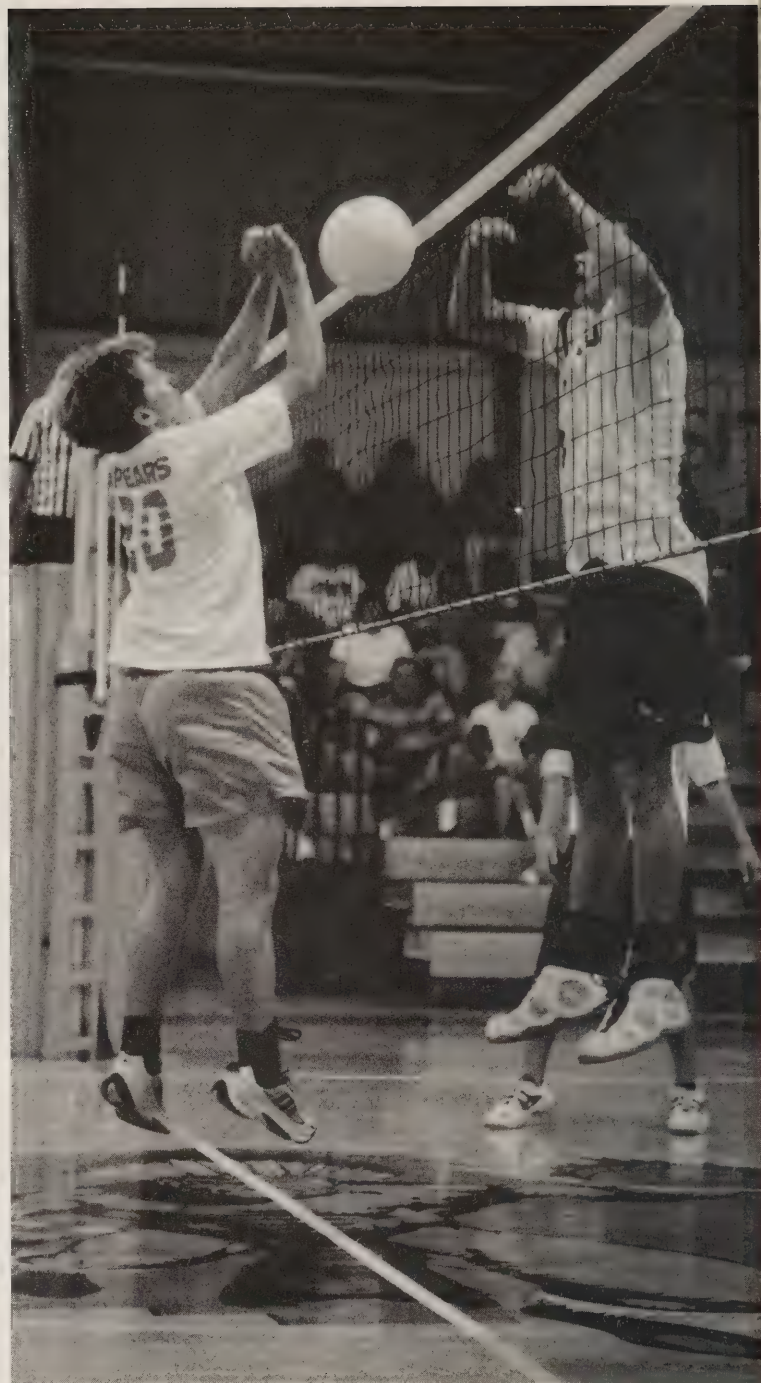

About half of the team consisted of first time varsity players, who looked up to the example the seniors set on and off the court. "Throughout the season, John Feeney and Al Arrington exemplified hard work that helped to carry us through the season. It was amazing how they found time to play volleyball and still were able to participate in other activities," explained Dan McCabe. Being a first time player on varsity was a big step up. It required another level of dedication and play. After playing on JV for his sophomore year, Robert Fore said, "Playing on varsity was a lot more competitive than JV. It was also a challenge playing with players that had previously been on varsity and I looked up to them as an example of how to be a more dedicated player." The team worked together to make the best of every game.

JV had an unbelievable season, winning the majority of its games. Many of the players were young and new to the sport. Despite this, they learned quickly and became a force to contend with. They learned quickly and played with aggression and strength against their opponents.

During both the varsity and JV games, the stands were crowded with spirited fans. Students, family, and friends all came to support and cheer for the players. Some came in orange and brown and others came as they were, but either way they were an inspiration to the team.

-Natalie Smith

Tight Ball! Trying to save a ball that was blocked, Matt Spears does his best to get the ball back over the net. Matt, as a setter, not only had to set up the hitters, but also had to defensively cover the net.

"The pride of Monacan Volleyball could be seen by the way the team came out and played every point."

Set It UP!

Dressed for the game, ribbons in the hair and ready to play. Girls' volleyball was pumped. The anticipation for the night's action spread like a wild fire through the hearts of the girls. The adrenaline was coursing through their veins as they stepped on the court. The whistle blew, five seconds to serve and ... an ace. "Ahh...Ace!" chanted the girls.

Through the art of executing the perfect pass and set in order to "put the ball down" the girls scored the winning point. With a tough defense and a strong offense, the varsity team defeated its opponents. From the warm-up run to the end of the match, the girls were psyched for the game. Practicing hard and for many hours gave the girls the energy to play. Learning new defensive strategies which allowed them to fake out the opposition enabled the girls to go from a sideout to a point. Mental toughness gave the team the confidence to know that they would win.

"What's a 6-2?" said most of the junior varsity players. The learning curve of volleyball began to expand as they were taught to play the game. The nervousness of taking a plunge onto the court, for the first time. Experiencing what it was, like when knee pads just did not work. Knowing that they were the "new players". Learning how to pass the ball with flat forearms. Learning that serving the ball overhand was not as easy as it looked. With the occasional butterflies in their stomachs while scrimmaging with the varsity players, they became tough for their opponents. They started out a little frightened, but as the season progressed, they became strong and determined. The season proved to be a tough one, but in the end the teams won.

Taking Aim. With the ball in her sight, varsity captain, Andrea Lipp, swings for the kill. Lipp was a power house hitter for the team this season.

Stepping Up to the Tee

One last putt and the ball rolled into the ninth hole! On weekday afternoons, the golf team was found at Stonehenge practicing putts and swings. Junior, Paul Cuomo commented, "Practice was fun but we also had a chance to improve our skills and hangout together."

Sandtraps and the rough are major challenges when it comes to golf. With practice, challenges can be avoided for the most part, but sometimes, an unwanted situation occurs. J.D. Wassum explained, "The hardest thing is overcoming a bad score and not getting yourself down about it."

Districts were held at Birkdale Country Club where the team placed fourth, only seven strokes in back of first place. Two players with outstanding rounds, Paul Cuomo and Matt Brantingham, represented the team at regionals.

Even though golf is an expensive sport, it continues to grow in popularity. Playing golf helps prepare students for futures as business leaders. Golf has evolved into a sport for the business world. Whether it is an opportunity to get to know clients on a more personal basis or to talk about closing business deals, golf has become an important part of professional relationships. Golf offers a chance to relax, talk, and enjoy the competition.

4. New View! Getting ready, Ben Arner plans out his next shot.

Tough Situations! Lining up his shot, senior Brandon Moss gets his ball out of the rough. During practice, players were able to prepare themselves for tough situations that might arise during matches.

Next Hole! Waiting for others to complete the hole, freshman Michael Latimer holds the flag. Michael's first year on the golf team was filled with new and memorable experiences.

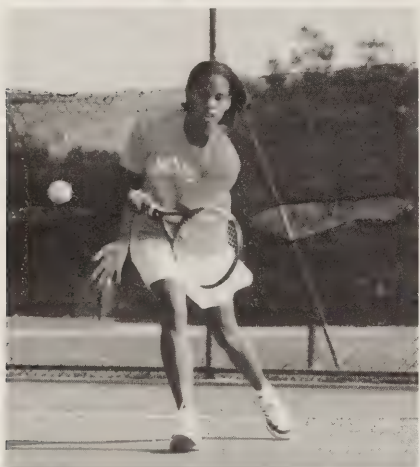

Perfect in Every Way! While following through on a shot, golf cleats not only look sleek and stylish, they are practical. The small spikes on the bottom keep a golfer's foot steady while his power and concentration is on the ball.

When the team sets foot on the green, the shoes were essential. A typical golf cleat is a sleek, white leather, saddle-style shoe. On the bottom there are soft, thin spikes that will not damage the course. Golf cleats provide traction for the follow through on a swing.

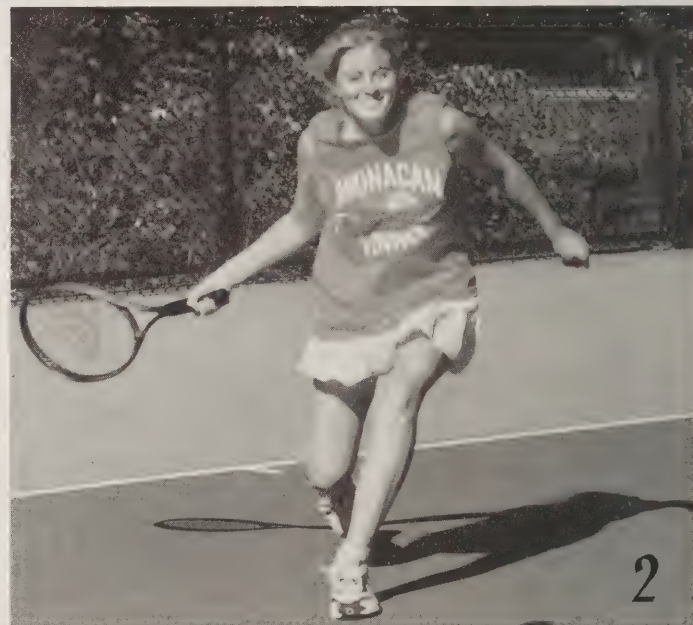

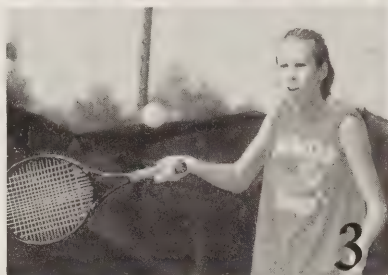

"The spikes give you traction and keep you steady while you swing."
-Michael Latimer

All for "Love"

Being a team is not just about winning. It is about hard work and determination. It is also about teamwork and friendship. Being a small team of thirteen people, the girls got to know each other personally and developed strong friendships. They cheered the others on through the good times and the bad. Shannon Norris stated, "It's not mainly about winning, it is about looking back at the way you played, highlighting the good things and correcting the errors. You can't dwell on a loss. There is always another match, another practice."

Since there were five new members, the girls had to come together and learn how to be a team. They had to learn each other's strengths and weaknesses and to teach each other new skills. This was no problem, however, for the team was committed to an endeavor. Every day after school, the girls would meet on the courts and battle it out amongst each other. Each one learned new skills and fundamentals. Meredith Schantz remarked, "I really enjoyed working with the girls."

Ending the season, all of the girls went out to celebrate their tremendous efforts. They reflected on what they had accomplished throughout the season. They had learned new skills and determination: friendship and learning were the chief achievements.

Taking charge. In position to return the ball, Amy Zachary prepares to attack it. Her talents have benefitted the team throughout the years

Tennis shoes must have great traction in order to improve performance and agility. All the girls on the team have the same tennis shoe. This shows unity. Acting the same, looking the same, and working the same are all parts of being a team.

"Tennis shoes are essential to a tennis player's balance and traction on the court."

-Meredith Schantz

On the Run

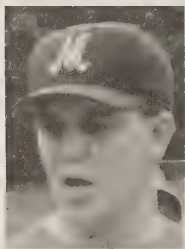

Each precious second ticks away as the first runner nears the finish line. The rest of the athletes huff and puff behind as the three mile run ends. A sense of accomplishment floods into the runners' heads as this day's cross country meet comes to a close.

Despite the myth, cross country is in no way the same as track. In track, the runners must stick to a circular, never-ending asphalt covered track. Cross country takes place on all kinds of terrains with many different settings. Athletes can find themselves on "nature outings" as their three mile runs take them on dirt paths, nature trails, and neighborhood streets. Throughout a run, the athlete can encounter rocks, tree roots, and even animals which he or she must be ready to maneuver around. Besides keeping his or her eyes and feet observant, a runner must always keep his or her breathing and pace in check.

Through all of these lessons on stamina and endurance, the cross country runner learns to be disciplined. Discipline helps the runner to concentrate on the task and know how far his or her body will go. Beginning to learn, freshman runners embarked on the cross country journey. "Our freshman and sophomore runners truly displayed the great potential of the future Monacan Cross Country teams. We are looking forward to years to come," Coach Porterfield commented. Discipline for new and experienced runners proved to be a most important characteristic that tested not only the runner's physical strength, but his or her focus to win as well.

-Ashley Haygood

"A Hard Day's Work." Recovering from the exhausting run, senior Brenden Halligan takes a breather before beginning his next race.

"We were a really young team trying to get experienced, but we had a fun time while doing it."

"$100?!" It's unbelievable the amount of money some people will pay for sneakers, but to athletes the price is worth it. Although a pricetag can skyrocket beyond belief, a certain shoe can enhance and improve the performance of the athlete making it worth the extra dough spent on our feet's best friends.

With all the different types of running, aerobic, and sports-oriented shoes out there, it's difficult to figure out which ones are for what. The classic running shoe is good for the occasional jog while cross-trainers can take you anywhere you want to train.

"Just like walking on air." The right kind of shoe can make the difference between painful blisters or callus-free bliss.

Shoot to Win

With one second remaining, a ball of orange soared through the air, hit the backboard, and sank through the hoop. Exuberant applause broke out in the crowd. We had sunk the game winning shot.

To all boys interested in playing basketball at the varsity level, it must be understood that dedication and preparation are main factors in the team's success. Preparation meant practice two hours a day and five days a week for those who wanted to be a part of the team. Dedication meant keeping up with good grades while playing and being willing to strive for the best in every situation.

Prayer was an essential part of the group preparation. "Before the game, we would huddle and forget about the crowd because our determination was to prove our ability to each other as a team," said Quincy Taylor. They prayed and held hands in hope of winning as a team.

The team progressed from being just friends to a close-knit family while practicing on the court. By practicing and seeing each other everyday, they could joke around at practice, but put the serious skills together for the game.

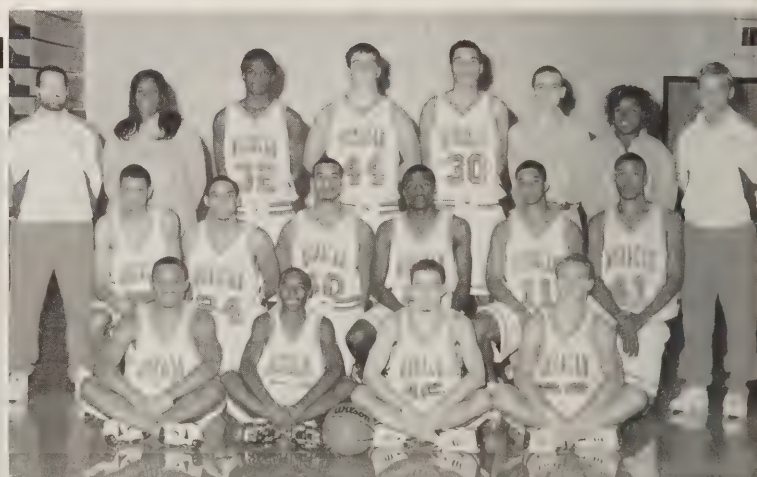

They put forth their best efforts and were satisfied with their whole season together as a team. They not only matured on the court, but they bonded for a memorable end to an unforgettable season.

-Stacey Walden

"Who's Your Daddy?" Obviously no one from Manchester. Guard Jeff Henthorn throws the ball back into play. Being in position to catch the ball and run down the court after a player has saved the ball was an easy way to make two points.

1. "Whats My Name" Determined to keep the ball from going out of bounds, senior Jermaine Hargrove jumps up to the competition. 2. "Jumpball, Get it!" One of the tallest players, standing at 6'4", junior Ralph Brown goes up for the tip off. 3. "Get Off Me!" Up against a strong defense, Brandon Chavis rocks the Manchester Lancers. 4. "Pump This Up!" Basketball shoes are a key part of a player's game. They can help to make a dynamic player even better.

A Team By Itself

It's all in the team, right...Wrong! It's all in the shoes. Shoes are a key aspect to a player's game. They can make you jump higher, run faster, and pivot with perfection. In the age of Michael Jordan and Grant Hill, the styles and fads changed like a teenage girl's wardrobe. Available in a variety of styles and colors in a store near you.

"We wore Nikes because they gave us really good ankle support. There were light, which helped us move our feet on defense."
-Jermaine Hargrove

The game of basketball required a player to possess many skills in order to be successful. It took smarts, dedication, endurance, and most importantly, the ability to shoot and handle a basketball. A team had to be versatile in shooting at different spots on the court and being able to execute plays. Layups, jump shots, foul shots, and the most uncommon, slam dunks were the shots that must be mastered in order to have a winning team.

Both the JV and Freshman teams played in close games during the season, but at times, foul shots were what determined their wins or losses. "The most important shot to make is the foul shot. In a close game, it could change the outcome," says point-guard Michael Gallahugh. Most players did not realize that the opportunity to make their foul shots could make or break the game for them. Practicing the foul shot was a drill done in practice two or three times a week. "We have to practice our shooting motion and concentration when shooting foul shots in practice, that way when we are in a game situation, it will come natural to us," stated player Aaron Smith. For these players, perfect practice on their foul shots had made for an almost perfect season. "We had an up and down season, losing some of the games we could have won, but overall we worked hard and had a lot of fun," commented Matt Hinshaw. All around both teams had a winning season.

-Natalie Smith

Defying Gravity. With a run, push, and jump, Doren Brown works his way to the basket. Lay-ups are one of the most effective shots taken.

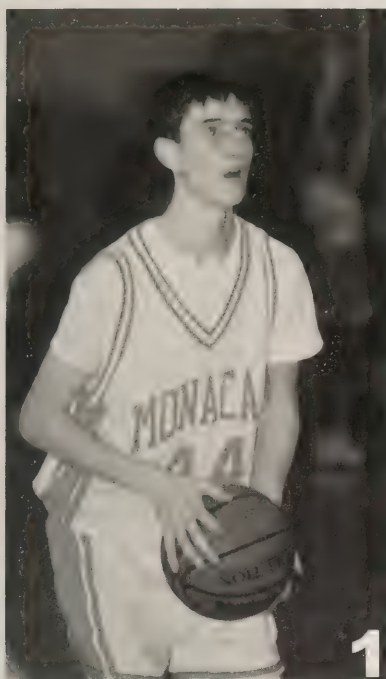

"Working with this group of young men was a pleasure. They played hard and improved their game in many ways. It was very gratifying to see how well they meshed and played as a team."

Filling The Hoop

As the varsity girl's basketball team proved, size does not matter. With only ten players, it seemed that options for any team would have been limited, but the girls pulled together and became the close team unit they needed to be. Composed of juniors and seniors, varsity had much in common and took team bonding to a new level.

Starting out with their traditional spaghetti dinner, the girls helped to bring themselves closer together in order to spark the chemistry needed on and off the court for a successful season. The bonding time served as a chance to get to know each other since they would be spending the next few months together. "It's a great time for us to just get together and goof off! It also brings us closer together as friends and teammates," quoted Annie Davis. Along with the dinner tradition comes the pre-game locker room conversations. This time served as another means for the girls to bond. "We try to pump up each other up and not let anyone get down on themselves. We also share our everyday problems," commented Cindy Davis. Expressing the ideals and pressures to each other helped to tighten the team unity.

On a different level, JV brought young and inspired athletes together to form a new team. JV had to learn each other's abilities and weakness in order to play well together. Working as a team, JV went out and fought the best it could, ending in an enjoyable season. Starting young, the JV team would surely grow into an outstandingly strong varsity team.

Almost three-fourths of the varsity team will be returning next year. The season could be summed up as, "We had a good season and a lot of fun. We challenged ourselves and our opponents. I'm looking forward to another year to come back and defeat some more teams," quoted Kim Corrada.

- Ashley Haygood & Stephanie Weiler

"Getting Height" Determined to make the basket, Aubrey Beatty shot the ball far over her opponent's head. Being a senior, Aubrey was not only a role model for the JV team but for fellow teammates as well.

"This year's team made a commitment to work hard. Though we had some disappointing losses, we also had moments of brilliance."

Monacan World Order

The tension mounted as the wrestlers stepped on the mat. The referee blew the whistle, and the crowd went wild. The wrestlers circled each other in excited anticipation of who was going to make the first move. The atmosphere of a match was exhilarating. In the beginning, each wrestler prepared himself, body and mind, to take on another in his weight class. As he stepped up to the mat and battled it out, the crowd screamed and cheered. There were several techniques used in winning a match. The most obvious was to pin, which means an automatic win, but you could also cradle or headlock an opponent. Any and all of these techniques required skill and strength. At last, a winner was announced, by either discussion or a pin.

For the wrestling team, the thrill of a match and a winning season were nothing new. With a district title on the line, the team had to prepare not only their bodies, but their attitudes on the mat as well. "I was really looking forward to this season. We had a lot of guys come out, and I was impressed at how hard we all worked," said captain Stephen Burks. Pushing themselves as hard as they could, the team practiced everyday, including Saturday mornings. It's easy to see that their hard work paid off. For the second year, the team captured the district title. The team sent fourteen wrestlers to districts, and several walked away with championships. With their third ranking as a team, ten of the fourteen advanced to the regional tournament. Being the best was always on the minds of any athlete, but for wrestlers, there wasn't an option.

Trying To Escape! Using all of his strength, James Berberich tries to escape from his opponents fierce grip. The escape would allow James to set up his opponent for a take down.

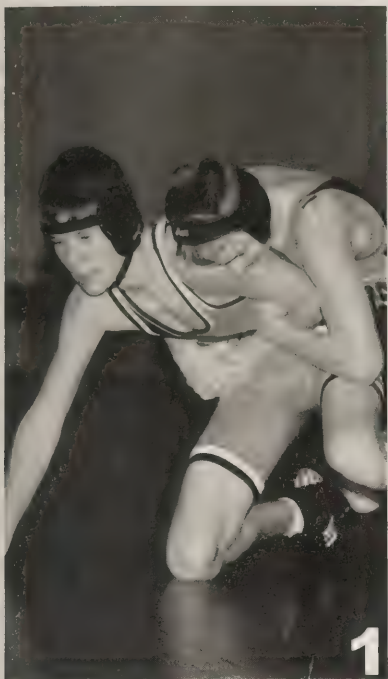

"We had a really young team this year, and I'm proud of the way they worked. I'm looking forward to seeing the guys again next year and anticipate a strong season."

1. Got to Get Up! Preparing to get up and get points, Josh Thomas hurries to his feet. 2. Another One Bites the Dust. Going for the pin, Stephen Burks breaks down his opponent. 3. Ready, Set Go. In their starting position, Jerry Keller and Robbie Flahive practice escapes for their next big match. 4. Take 'Em To the Mat. Dominating the match, Brian Fortner prepares to run a pin combination.

Hold It Right There! Holding his practice partner to the mat in a headlock, Cesar Hidalgo successfully pins his opponent to the mat. Practicing pins allowed wrestlers to be successful in matches.

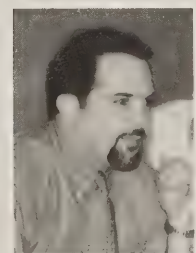

"You're Not Getting Up!" Working the head of the other wrestler, Eric Hlava attempts to gain back points. Hlava has been a member of the team for three years and has helped the team gain several important victories.

"It's All in the Shoes!" Shoes are the most important part of the wrestlers' equipment. Without them, they couldn't wrestle.

Shoes are important in any sport that a person plays, but in wrestling, they are essential. Wrestling shoes, next to headgear, are the most important piece of equipment a wrestler has. They give the wrestler traction on the mat, mobility throughout the match, and ankle support. The shoes have a gum like sole on them that gives the traction. Their high top style allows for ankle support, and they come in just about every color.

"I'm proud of this year's team for its work ethic and determination. They never quit striving to win the district title again this year. I look forward to next year's team to do even better." - Coach Tuzzo

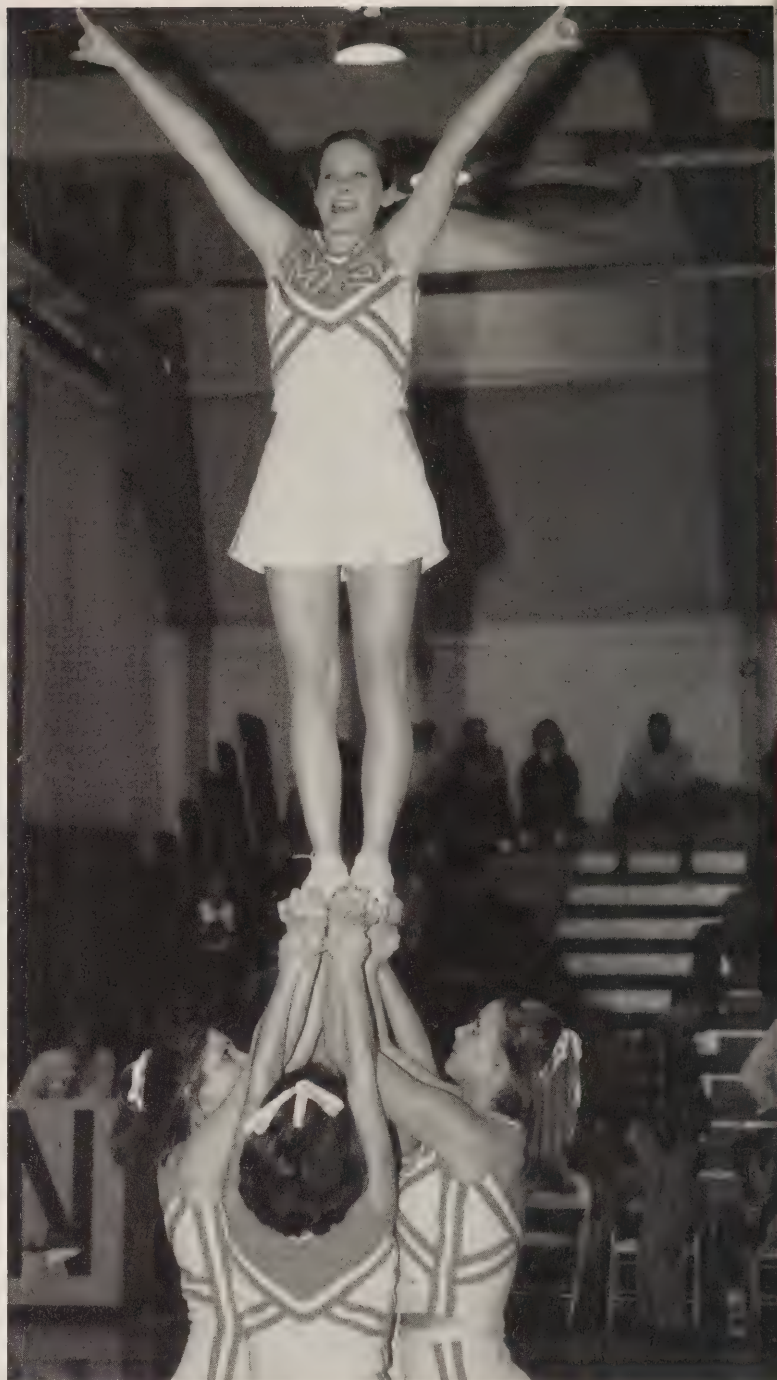

Stepping Up to the Crowd

What can you count on to be there through the heat, rain, and extreme cold? The varsity cheerleaders were always there to keep our spirits up and to cheer us on. These girls had no fear. They stood in front of a huge crowd, cheered, tumbled, and were thrown. Contrary to popular belief, they worked hard to make their performances perfect. They dedicated long hours over the summer, fall, winter, and Saturdays to work out every detail. During the summer, they learned new cheers, chants, dances, and stunts. "I loved being able to cheer varsity my senior year," says senior April Bowles.

Football season began, and the cheerleaders were pumped and ready to get the enormous crowd hyped up. Rain or shine, they were there to support the team. Football season ended but, for the cheerleaders, the season continued. With a new set of cheers, the girls practiced in between the two seasons. Throughout basketball season, the cheerleaders balanced school, jobs, friends, and two to three games a week. Basketball season came to a close and so did the cheerleaders' season. "Although we had our share of problems, they allowed us to become closer as a squad to make for a great season," said junior Crystal Stewart. The hard work and dedication had paid off.

-Kelly Sorrells

Flying High. During an outstanding halftime routine, Allison Ballos is lifted high into the air. The cheerleaders must have complete trust in each other in order to perform these stunts.

"Get Me Down." During a timeout, the cheerleaders raise Matt Macey up in the air so he can yell to the crowd. Matt worked hard with the squad on all the routines.

"Get Psyched" With a smile on her face, Kristi Thomas claps along with the squad. The cheerleaders always had to be smiling and upbeat during their performances at the games.

1. "All Hail." To Mighty, Mighty Chief, Matt Macey. As the school's mascot, Matt did cheers, stunts, and helped pump up the crowd. 2. "Let's Go Big Orange!" With pom poms raised high, Crystal Stewart cheers to the crowd with enthusiasm. 3. "All smiles." Taking a break for a few moments, the varsity cheerleaders pose for a quick picture. 4. "Stretch." With concentration and stamina, Crystal Stewart and Allison Ballos slide into the splits with the help of the other cheerleaders.

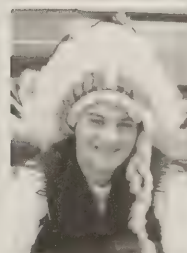

"Stand up and clap your hands." Looking up to an enormous crowd, the varsity cheerleaders try to get the fans to cheer along. The cheerleaders were always there to keep the fans hyped up for victory.

Chief spellout. With pompoms in hand, the varsity cheerleaders and mascot, Matt Macey, spellout 'Chiefs' to the crowd. With this cheer, the fans were able to join their voices with the cheerleaders to show the extent of their school spirit.

As the school mascot, junior Matt Macey practiced and cheered with the varsity cheerleading squad. "I enjoyed attending the football and basketball games as a mascot. I was happy to represent the school," recalled Matt. Matt had to be able to perform almost everything the cheerleaders did, including the cheers and stunts. He had a great impact on improving the school spirit by showing his own.

"It was great becoming closer with the fans and the varsity cheerleaders."

-Matt Macey

Pump Up the Volume

Jumping, tumbling, cheering, and smiling were four key things that went into being a cheerleader, and the JV and Freshman cheerleading squads had it all. These two squads had two different seasons. JV cheerleaders began practice in the late summer to prepare for an exciting football and basketball season. The girls cheered every Thursday night and were at the varsity games on Friday nights selling programs, raffle tickets, and giving extra spirited support. The squad cheered in the pep rally and also had a chance to cheer at the varsity Homecoming game in front of a tremendous crowd. The squad also cheered for all the JV boys' basketball games. They had a long season that was packed with fun and excitement.

The freshmen cheerleaders had their tryouts a few weeks after school began. The squad was picked, and practices began shortly afterward. Though the girls did not cheer for football, they had to practice hard for the long basketball season ahead. Along with cheering for freshman boys' basketball, they cheered for the JV and varsity girls' basketball teams. Sometimes the girls would have so many games that the squad had to be split up in order to cover them all.

Through it all, the JV and freshmen squads had great seasons filled with orange pride.

-Kelly Sorrells

"Ready? Okay." With tight arms and big smiles, Jennie Bernardini and Jessica Williams execute a cheer to perfection. Tight movement and unison was the key to good cheering.

Heather Trainum cheers for the boys during the game. 4. Synchronized. Lined up in formation, the freshmen cheerleaders clap and cheer in unison.

"Give Me Fifty!" After finishing her pushups, Jewell Sharpe sits on the floor to catch her breath as she watches the others finish. On pep rally days, the cheerleaders were punished with pushups if they talked prior to the pep rally.

"On the Ground, Now!" These cheerleaders are not doing pushups to stay in shape; they are being punished. Cheerleaders were prohibited from talking to anyone on pep rally days, and some girls obviously found it extremely difficult to keep mum all day.

"We Say Monacan, You Say Chiefs..." In an effort to get the crowd pumped, the JV cheerleaders chant a cheer that requires the crowd's response. Crowd-involved cheers helped raise the spirit level during sporting events.

Dancin' Divas

Which team of Foxy Ladies practices until Twelve Past Midnight with the intensity of Machineheads, demands audiences to Check em Out Now, and rouses the home crowd to WoofWoof as opposing teams Bite the Dust?--The Monacettes.

The Monacettes dance team displayed serious talent, dedication, and school spirit during the 1999-2000 season. Practicing from August until March four days a week, the girls perfected every dance move and prepared for their half-time routines and competition dances. Known for their fresh ideas and exciting combinations, the Monacettes chose new competition outfits of sassy leopard print and grooved to popular tunes from artists such as Jay-Z, Van Halen, Fat Boy Slim, and the Venga Boys.

During the summer, the Monacettes came together, going to UDA camp at U of R to work on team-building, choreographing, and performing as a team. Friendship was a big part of the Monacettes spirit. When asked about her thoughts on the group as a whole, Carrie Huffman enthusiastically said, We always go out together. Our favorite place to eat is the Olive Garden. We always got this hot waiter who gives us free food. The girls are also known for having regular sleepovers, car washes, special dinners, and holiday parties where they exchange gifts. They also use their creativity in practices, for example, several team members practiced their jumps off the diving board at the local pool.

Award winning was a Monacette tradition. At the U of R summer camp, the girls recieved a Superior squad trophy. Barbara Estes, and Becca Vaughan also went on to be chosen for the All-Star Team. At the Manchester competition, Monacettes won third place, beating out all area teams in the jazz/funk category. As always, the team enjoyed a wild, fun-filled year.

On track. The group clumps together to stretch it out before the half-time routine. High-energy dance routines were the Monacettes forte.

Black or white? Black split-sole jazz shoes and white leather cheering sneakers are the Monacettes uniform shoes. Both provided the extra support needed for intense moves.

Shoes were an important part of a dancer's costume. Whether it was her black Capezio split-soles, or white Nike athletic shoes, they could definitely enhance a performance. The split-sole tennis shoes offered support for her ankles and let dancers do steps such as toe stands. The athletic shoes could help a dancer jump with extra bounce, because of the support under her foot. The different kinds of shoes that dancers wore must match their outfit, but also must help them to do their best.

Our shoes help us with specific moves and overall performance. The black split-sole jazz boots provide us with ankle support, flexibility, and protection.

A Rhythm in the Step

There's rhythm in the step... The crowd roared as the steppers began to do what they do best: stomp, stomp, stomp; voices, feet, hands, and even faces were put to work. The proficiency of the captains and team members made it all work. Captain Dalina Robinson stated, "We have to be open-minded and creative."

What exactly is stepping? Stepping originated in the U.S. through African-American fraternities and sororities to show brotherly/sisterly love. Sponsor Patti Reeves explained, "It is like playing a musical instrument with your body." It was a way to stand up, make some noise, and show some excitement.

Teamwork was the number one criteria for acceptance as a "Chief" stepper. Manager Natasha Johnson stated, "The steppers are good and work hard to be the best. Moreover, everyone had to do his part to make the team successful." Fan, Chenelle Coleman said, "What also counted was coordination, rhythm, and talent." No matter when the steppers performed, fans packed the stands in anticipation of seeing them light up the floor. Adam Brock put it best by saying, "The steppers are the bizzomb, yo!"

Though the very dedicated steppers were incomplete without sponsors, they stuck together. Eventually Beth Lucas and Patti Reeves stepped up to take on the job. The major highlights for the steppers were having the opportunity to compete in both the Fluvanna County and Virginia State University step shows. The steppers proved they had "Chief" pride.

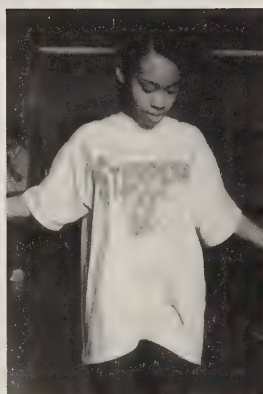

- Jamar Arvin & Timothy Irby

Kristina Whitehurst, Aja Pascual, Tamika Hunt, Marquita Blunt, Latoya Brown, and Dalina Robinson take some time out to show their unique bond.

All Together Now. Practice pays off as the steppers do their "thang" on the court. In each step there was something new they did to dazzle the crowd.

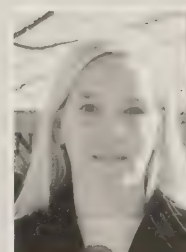

Sponsorly Love. Mrs. Patti Reeves and Mrs. Beth Lucas are overjoyed as their position as sponsors. This was their first year as faculty members and as team sponsors.

A sponsor - one word that summed up so much. Being a sponsor for a team required tremendous dedication, organized management, and responsibility for being a positive role model.

For the steppers, two women held the responsibility in their hands. Mrs. Beth Lucas and Mrs. Patti Reeves took their job and responsibilities very seriously. When asked about being a leader, Mrs. Lucas proudly stated, "I consider it a privilege." Mrs. Reeves agreed by saying, "I feel like it is very rewarding."

Both Mrs. Lucas and Mrs. Reeves played a huge role in keeping the team high-stepping into a new season.

"Push for 'UNITY'."
-Patti Reeves

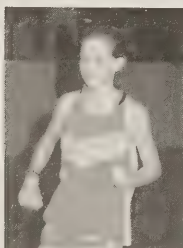

From Start to Finish

At exactly 2:15, the track team met by the track, ready to start a new day of practice. They warmed-up their muscles by running two laps around the track. Then, a member of the team led the athletes in various arm and leg stretches, such as the butterfly stretch. After an hour and a half of loosening their muscles, they marched to the track to practice their field or track events. The sprinters quickly glided along the rough, graveled track, working hard to achieve their much-desired times. The long-distance runners set out to improve their endurance and stamina by running miles in the subdivisions of Smoketree and Stonehenge. "Running distance relaxes me and it is fun," stated sophomore Kathryn Rannals. Not only were their work-outs important to prepare for meets, but they were also a way to "stay in shape and meet new people," remarked junior Jennings Whiteway and sophomore Adrienne Blaylock.

The track meets were a way for the runners to find out if all of their hard work paid off. At the meets, each sprinter and long-distance runner quietly sat in the bleachers talking to friends, awaiting his or her event to be called. When the runner's event was called, he jogged to the track and lined up behind the white line, ready to run. He heard the gunshot pierce through the air, above the voices of the cheering crowd. The athletes set off, each determined to win. Running around the track, all he could concentrate on was crossing the line first. He steadily rounded the first curve, and looked ahead to the straight-a-way confidently, he sprinted ahead, passing his opponents on the right and left of him. He had the lead when he crossed the finish line! First place! All of his hard-work paid off, and he left the meet feeling good about his performance and himself.

-Katherine Rohman and Sydney Dannenburg

Flying high. Leaping high into the air, senior Sally Linkenauer completes her jump for the farthest distance. Long jump required strong legs and great speed in order to produce a maximum distance.

Strong Finish. Sprinting to the end, Tara Wagstaff picks up speed as she catches sight of the finish line. A final burst of energy often made the difference between victory and defeat.

Way To Go Girls! With smiles on their faces, the guard happily leaves the practice field after a productive day of band camp. For the entire month of August the guard learned drill sets and perfected the fundamentals of spinning.

Flying High! Standing at right shoulder the flag line awaits for initiation to begin drop spins. Every practice began with a warm-up which included the most basic of guard techniques.

1. Forward, March! The guard leads the Homecoming parade.

2. Turn, Turn, Turn! Katie Anderson executes a toss while heading toward the sideline.

3. Strike a Pose! During a cool August day the flag line takes time out from practice to goof around.

4. In Sync! Beth Pagani, Erin Groat, and Cegea Samples, hit count fifteen of the opening fan fare.

In it to spin

"We spend countless hours spinning to produce an awesome show." - Andrea Noel

The sounds of the drumline's cadence echoed through the stadium which indicated the arrival of the band and color guard. As the group rounded the track with their heads held high and feet in step, the horn signaled the start of the halftime show. The guard members set their equipment down and filed into the opening set. Once in place, the drum majors initiated the first 32 count move. The music of the pit quietly built the presence of a distant storm. Another 16 counts, and then again another 16 counts, then like the sudden impact of a storm, the band and guard abruptly joined in with the pit music. The opening song moved quickly as the guard struggled to keep each complicated move precise. The calm of the storm came with the second song, "Watermark", as the guard moved to the slow, beautiful rhythm. Lastly, they moved "Into the Storm" with the concluding song. The high-paced movement and intense work made for an awesome conclusion to "Stormworks."

Along with performing their incredibly difficult show during halftime, the guard and band traveled throughout Virginia to compete. The guard received a rating of excellent at V.B.O.D.A. in Virginia Beach and turned out outstanding performances at every competition. When asked about her favorite part of guard, Lisa Ing stated, "I love the feeling of performing and the sounds of the crowd cheering."

-Katie Anderson

"Hit That Count!" First year member, Laura King, spins her flag while heading to wards the end zone during the opening song. Often the most difficult skill for guard was putting the intense flag work with the difficult drill.

"What A Shoe!" Two of the guard members offer to show off their not so stylish jazz boots. While the shoes were not exactly fashionable, the design allowed for great support.

Ever wonder how the guard was able to move quickly around the field without stumbling? It was all in the shoes! The girls wore a dance style shoe known as a jazz boot. These shoes were black leather with a thinly padded sole which allowed for great traction.

"I didn't care much for the shoes but they went well with the outfits."

-Rachel Robinson

Hoopin' It Up

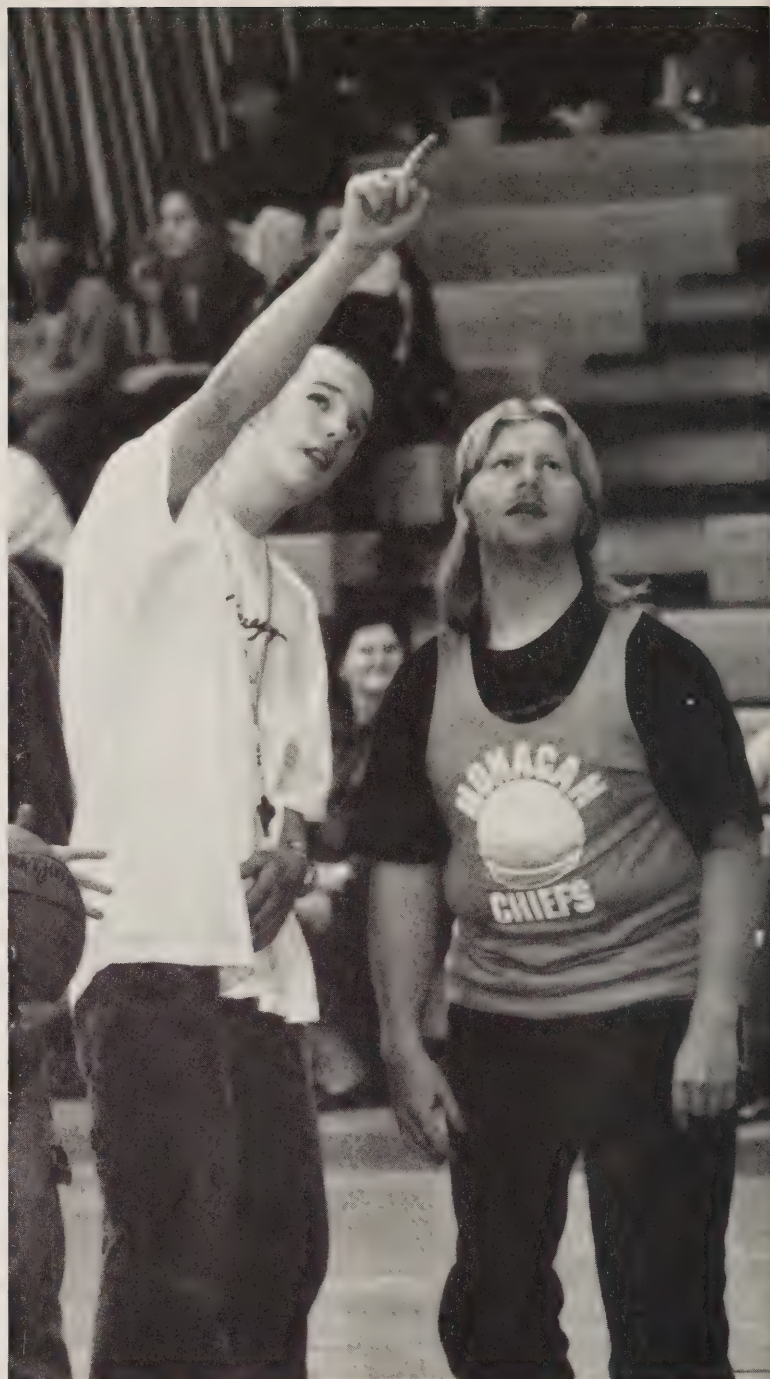

There were thirty seconds left on the clock...the score was tied...the home team drove down the court...the crowd went wild with anticipation! Life went into slow motion as the ball rolled around the rim and at last fell through the net. This was not the previous night's NBA game; this was about our own Z.T. Medford Hoopsters. Who needed Michael Jordan when we had Jonathan Koch?

Thursday meant the gym was jam-packed with enthusiastic fans. As the cheerleaders psyched up the crowd, the ever-spirited Ms. Molsky announced the starting line-up. There was a jump ball, and the game began. With adrenaline pumping, the players jazzed up the court with their skill, and the cheerleaders pumped up the crowd. When asked what her favorite part of cheering was, Alexis Greene stated, "I love the cheers, especially 'Who Rocks the House.'" Holly Langgood added that her favorite part of cheering was "working for the Chiefs!" One of the highlights of the season for the cheerleaders was when they danced, and the Highland Springs players joined in on the fun.

Back on the court, the players were lighting up the board with their precise shots and outstanding passing abilities. Ricky Vann remarked, "My favorite part of basketball is having one of my buddies with me." Looking back on the excellent season, David Wells pointed out that the thing he enjoyed most was "earning a varsity letter." The season was the most fun when the Hoopsters joined together and helped each other score.

-Katie Anderson and Tasha Feller

"Point Me in the Right Direction" Student referee, Jerry Keller, points out Ricky Vann's goal. Being an MOMD ref is a coveted position for many volunteering souls.

"We are a reflection of those around us. Our fans make us a success regardless of wins or losses. Thank you for your support."

1. Speed Demon! Team captain, Jonathan Koch, takes control of the ball and flies toward the home net. 2. "I'm Open!" In position, David Wells raises his hands to signal for the ball to be passed. 3. "Hands Up!" With all eyes on the ball, Sal Bussa reaches for the rebound. 4. "Who Rocks the House?" With enthusiasm and a gleaming smile, Alexis Greene leads the fans in her favorite cheer.

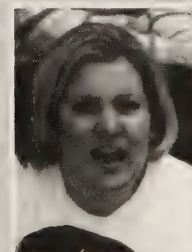

Total Concentration! Ashley Cheeks anticipates an exciting play. Ashley was not only a star on the court, but also did double duty as a Hoopster Cheerleader.

Roars of Approval! With cheers for victory, Katie Bradshaw urges the team to win.

Training the Winners

Who's going to patch a wound? Don't panic the Student Athletic Trainers are on the way. Also known as SAT's they stayed occupied with various sports, such as football, basketball, soccer, wrestling, baseball, and softball. A couple of the the trainers attended a camp at William and Mary over summer vacation, where they attended a four day workshop that consisted of lectures on anatomy, injuries, and taping. In the beginning of the month of August, the SAT's members woke up early in the morning to attend the football preseason. The SAT's taped if injuries occurred, prepared the guys for the season, and took care of normal accidents in football. The intensity was hot when running onto the fields to heal a small injury and get the players back in the game. The procedures performed by the SAT's were setting up and cleaning-up for games, wrapping, taping, icing, and heating the players. What an important job!

Why is sport medicine important? Becky Seibert answered, "Sports medicine means alot to me. It has made me more confident and sure of myself. You not only get a lot of respect from the coaches, but from your peers and yourself." Injury was a big part of playing a sport. Therefore, sports medicine had become a popular after school activity. Because of this, once a week, Ms. Harvey, a Certified Athletic Trainer teaches a class after school for the SAT's to learn new things such as emergency procedures. Also next year, Ms. Harvey will be teaching a class here at Monacan for those students who would like to learn steps for taking care of an injury. This class will be convenient to those students who play a sport or have other activities after school and can not be a regular athletic trainer. Ms. Harvey also coaches the SAT's by assigning them while they cover the sporting events. The attendance and dedication of the trainers was mandatory for our athetic teams because they took care of the injuries so the players could perform their best!

hands your hearts." - William Shakespeare

When school ended, the day did not. There was plenty still going on in the halls of Monaca after hours. SCA was planning for special senior activities late into the night. Key Club was helping out those who needed help. Interact was organizing a fund raiser to help others in need, the Latin club was discussing antiquities, and the environmental club was collecting used paper for recycling. Involvement in clubs and activities was the best part of the day for many students. They were able to focus on something they liked or believed in and to take action for a cause.

Clubs gave students a way to meet new people and to interact with friends. They kept them busy and were an outlet for creative juices. Without the fun of activities and social time that clubs provided, school may have seemed like all work and no play. But, thankfully, there was plenty to get involved in.

-The yearbook staff

"What tense is it supposed to be in?" Working on a story, Ashley Dominick asks other yearbookers for help.

"Step in Time" Not only did the band have to practice playing well, but they also had to practice walking together. At Homecoming, the band led us to the game.

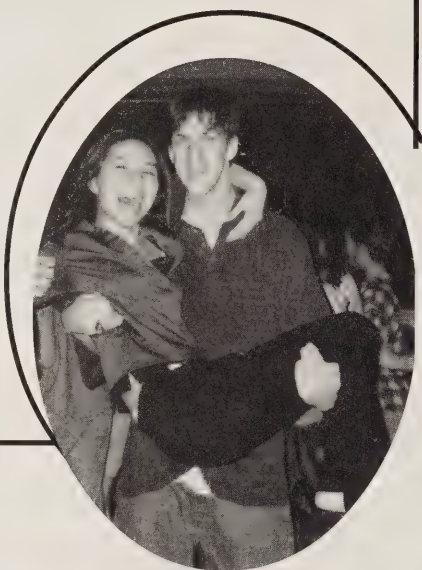

"Who We Are" Preparing a float for the Homecoming Parade, members of the Interact Club show Chief pride and advertise their club. Many clubs participated in the parade to make it a great success and a community event.

"Pin Prick!" Having her finger pricked in preparation for giving blood, Stacey Baldwin grins and bears it. Blood drives allowed students to give to everyone in the community.

Toga! Toga! Toga!

Veni, Vidi, Vici! On a long weekend in November, many Latin scholars took part in the biggest toga party in town. The annual Latin Convention, held at the Marriott, served as the common gathering place for Latin-loving high school students and teachers. Over the course of the two days, students were tested on their knowledge of Latin grammar and culture. "I gained a lot of valuable information about the language I study," commented Katherine Stennett. Aside from digging into their pools of Latin trivia, students studied the ancient Greeks and mythology. While testing was going on, lectures investigating the Latin world ran around the clock. Although the main purpose of the weekend was to be tested and gain some insight, the convention was a perfect opportunity for students to meet new people, make new friends, reunite with the old, and bond with fellow school-mates. Students also had fun meeting others, learning interesting facts about their language, going to a Roman banquet, making up skits, and dressing up in togas. "It was a very worth-while experience," added Rachel Tinsley. Everyone that attended had a great chance to increase his or her knowledge and to enjoy the experience.

Fascinatin' Rhythm

"I've got rhythm!" Thirty five voices-strong, Center Stage belted the powerful harmony as energy crackled onstage like a live current. The exclusive mixed show choir's precise moves, mesmerizing facials, and fine-tuned vocals kept the audience and judges captive with the strength and unity that only complete loyalty, dedication, and hard work can bring. Countless hours of practice, weekend retreats, overnights, competitions, festivals, concerts, and group outings brought the Center Stage "family" together. As with any family unit, hard times were many, but as they always do, the show choir managed to stay on top. While most show choirs began learning their show in late summer or early fall, Center Stage did not begin their show until December, giving the competition quite a head start. Under the leadership of veteran director, Dwight Graham, choreographer Tony Gibson, dance captains Barbara Estes and Edward Miller, and president Patricia Pineda, the group gave the show their all and deserved what they got: awards! At the Central VA Show Choir Invitational, Center Stage received a superior and won best vocal quality. At Lee-Davis High School, the group also took top honors, earning a superior rating, best vocal quality, and 1st Place in the mixed division. Whether practicing or performing, Center Stage met every challenge head on, creating memories, a love of music, and a family to last a lifetime.

Legend Making

Yearbook was a very meticulous craft on which editors and staff members worked from September until June. In order to produce an award-winning book editors stayed after school for countless hours piecing together the perfect look. "I never really appreciated the yearbook until I helped put it together. It takes a lot of time and dedication, but in the end, it will all be worthwhile," said Natalie Smith. Professional and in-class photographers took pictures of various sports, assemblies, competitions, and clubs. Without the photographers to catch those "kodak moments," the yearbook would not be the same. In order for stories and captions to be accurate, staff members often had to attend games and other school activities to get a true feeling of the event.

Staff members were assigned different layouts each deadline. They had to write an interesting story, crop pictures and write captions. It was then sent to the editors to revise and then back to the student for final corrections.

Yearbook was a team effort, if one member of the staff did not complete the work on time, everyone else was affected. The deadlines would be pushed back and then total chaos would set in. Meeting deadlines was a major part of the yearbook experience.

-Lauren Gallaher
and Kelly Sorrells

"What's the Word For..." Working hard on her basketball copy, junior Natalie Smith puts countless hours into the story. Many students stayed after school to complete their deadline.

"What a Mess!" Through all the clutter, senior Desiree Beatty tried to crop her picture to perfection. Cropping was an important part of the yearbook process.

"Who is That?" Working on a winter sports spread Tasha Feller, Katie Anderson, and Patricia Pineda attempt to put the layout together. Yearbook students often helped each other finish important deadlines.

"Please Don't Freeze!" Concentrating hard on the computer screen, Aubrey Beatty and Kelly Sorrells diligently type captions and stories into the proper files. Without the use of computers, the yearbook would be an even longer and more drawn out process.

"What are We Supposed To Do Now?" Feeling overwhelmed with an upcoming deadline, juniors Stephanie Weiler and Kelly Wilson ponder what to do next. In order to put together a layout, staff members had to be creative.

"Practice Makes Perfect" Reflecting their words in their facial expressions, Kelly Maynard and Melissa Looney go over their performance one more time. Preparing for Reader's Theater took hours of practice.

"In the Limelight" Trying not to forget their lines or miss a cue, Jeff Henthorn and Sally Linkenauer work together to achieve perfection. Everyone in each performance had to hold up his end, or the entire thing would be a flop.

"Amazing ... We Mean Really"

The halls and classrooms were overflowing with talent. Many students had special theatrical abilities, which were hardly ever demonstrated to fellow students. Reader's Theatre gave students the opportunity to express these talents in a unique and productive way. Reader's Theatre was put on by a combination of the communications three and four classes along with the very successful forensics team. The show took months of preparation and hours of after school practices. The reason the show was so special was because many of the pieces were written and developed for and by the students. Mrs. Bomboske was very important in making suggestions but still allowed students to be creative and original. The communication three and four classes divided into groups of eight to ten and wrote and directed humorous multiples. Different duos and humorous and dramatic interpretations were also performed. The show was cleverly hosted by juniors Nick Von Bank and Matt Macey. The performance was geared towards a variety of viewers, and the response was inevitable...one entertaining show!

-Stacey Walden

"Labor Isn't Easy!" During their reading about parenthood and labor, Meredith Dillard and Adam Worchester had the audience in stitches. Many of the stories for Reader's Theater helped us laugh at everyday events.

Latoya Deniece Brown

I have often wondered what it would feel like to know that you're about to graduate from high school. Latoya, I feel so proud of you. You're a great human being with a phenomenal personality. Although this is the end of your high school years, it's also the beginning to lots of new experiences. I know you will continue to make good choices. Remember, I love you and I'm always on your side.

Love you much,
Mommy

Rebecca Dale Acker

Becky,

You have always been able to do whatever you put your mind to...music, basketball, writing...but who would have believed that you would go so far with the swimming? We know you'll do great in college, and we want to remain your loyal cheering section.

Love,
Mom and Dad

Congratulations!

We are very proud of you and all your accomplishments.

Love,
Mom, Dad, And Laura

Sabrina Renee Hearld

The magnitude of happiness that you've brought to our lives is immeasurable. So wise beyond your years, your perspective, tremendous wit, and compassionate nature have left us amazed by you. We don't deserve you, but we certainly appreciate you, far more than you know. Whatever you choose to pursue in life, we know you'll excel; but don't forget to take care of you. You are the best. Good luck forever.

Love, Mom and Jim

Jeremiah Benjamin Dillon

You have grown from the sweet, loving child into a charming young man. You are blessed with talent and the only drummer we know who can play "Wipe Out". Live an honorable life and always be true to yourself and never settle for second best. We are very proud of you and all of your accomplishments. Remember we will always be there to help along the way. Our prayers are that you will always follow God's direction for your life.

Love,
Mom and Cleve

Reflections

Past, Present & Future

"If he can come into the world and show you that he's a little angel from the start,
If he can fuss and kick and lose his halo,
Then turn around and smile and win your heart....

If he delights you
Though at times he's naughty,
And makes you laugh at him instead of scold,
If at one moment, he can try your temper
And then the very next be good as gold...
If he's forever asking lots of questions
And bringing home the treasures he has found,
If he encounters puddles in his pathway
And stomps right through
Instead of going around,
If he can fill each day with high adventure,
And fill your life with happiness and joy
Then he'll be everything you've always wanted.
And YES you are Brian Rust,
You are everything that we always wanted
You are our happy, delightful Son."

We are truly blessed with a precious gift from God and that gift is you
We are so proud of the young man that you have become but remember you will always will be our "little Prince". Best wishes and have lots of FUN in college and May every game in life be a 300! ☺

We love you very, very much!!
Mama, Daddy and Kelly

Delia Rose Raymundo

Dear Delia,

It seems like only yesterday you were our little girl. Today, you've grown into a wonderful and beautiful human being. Success awaits you tomorrow because you are smart, considerate, and dedicated. You are our pride and joy but most of all you are our little girl.

Congratulations, much love, and God bless.

- Mom, Dad, Lyn, and Puppy

Lauren Michelle Barnett

You are our "Star", let your Light Shine! As we reflect over the years, each thought of you brings great joy, love and pride of all you have done and all you have yet to do. You are not only beautiful on the outside, but most important is the beauty which lives in your heart. You have given more to us than we could ever give to you. Remember we are always with you no matter where you go, enjoy life because "You can't take it with you."

With our deepest love,
Dad, Hillary, and Murphy

Cody James Eyerly

“Through the years, you always make us smile”

From a toy Pink Panther bigger than you, to a 1965 Mustang, it has been an awesome experience. We can't express the pride and joy it brings to us when we tell someone, "Cody is our son." Life is full of opportunities, there is no doubt that you will seize your opportunity, take it all the way to the top and be very successful in whatever you choose to do. We can never totally express how much we love you, you are special! Good luck son!

Love,
Mom and Dad

Leah Jean Kruzewski

From backyard bathing beauty to world traveler in 17 years! Watching you grow up has been like getting a present we could open every day. We know you'll continue to make us proud, as you always have!

Love,
Mom, Dad, Jackie, and Lanie

W. Garnett Bradberry

You've always marched to your own beat. Continue to be yourself- that will take you far in life. We are so proud of you!

Love,

Keith Wheeler Hagen

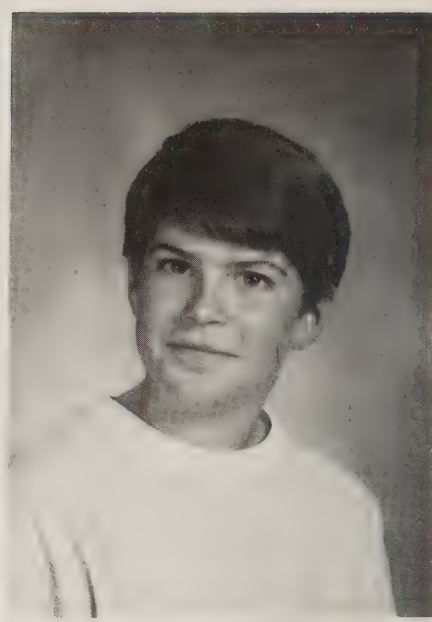

To Keith, from Mom "Grand Dad" and "Grand Ma" and "Dad"
 You have always been "the love of our lives" since you were born.
 Keep the strength of your convictions, the determination to follow your heart, and be true to yourself. You are a unique and talented man.

John Francis Feeney

Your sense of humor and your determination to succeed will serve you well as you continue your journey in life. You bring much joy and laughter into our lives. We are so very proud of the young man you have become.

We love you,
 Mom, Dad, and Megan

Brian,

You have brightened our lives in a way only you could have. When you graduate from Monacan, take with you memories of great friends and a loving family. We wish for you a life filled with exciting and rewarding experiences, filled with the same love and joy that you have brought to us.

Remember who loves you,
Mom, Dad and Tyler

Kelly Lauren Harvey

Dear Kelly,

We are so very proud of you-your accomplishments, successes, goals and most of all the young woman you are. Our pride and our love for you will always be there, and we wish continuing success in college and in life. You are an everlasting joy in our life and we love you.....

Always,
Dad, Mom, and Katie

Allison Dianne Ballos

These last 17 years have been the most rewarding times of my life. The laughter, the tears, and most of all the LOVE will always be

I LOVE YOU,
MOM

Jennifer Renee Strickland

You have always brightened the lives of everyone around you. From our fun times at the beach to your active life as a young lady, I have always supported you. I know you will continue with a successful life no matter what decisions you make. I am proud of you, Sunshine!

Love,
Mom

Amanda Brooke Tinsley

We have watched you grow, mature, and become the beautiful person you are. Thank you for the joy you have given us. We love you very much and are so very proud of you. May God continue to bless you and direct your path as you press on to higher goals.

We love you,

Katie

Jarrad O'Keefe Holmes
Your cheerful enthusiasm adds such life to ordinary days. The warm hearted way you think about others makes it so nice to be around you.

To see you grow up without ever growing away from those who love you is wonderful and rare. May God continue to bless you and grace you with his smile. You have brought so much love and sunshine into our lives.

Your Loving Family

Lindsey Noel Lowman

Where did the years go?
The precious three year old grew into a beautiful young lady. Get ready world, here she comes!

We love you,

Always be open to the wonders and endless possibilities life has to offer, and govern your "kingdom" with honesty and compassion. You take our love and support wherever your journey may lead.

Mom, Dad, and Sid

Dennis Joseph and Stacy Lynne Licari

Since the day you two were born, we have been blessed with a cup overflowing with love, joy, and laughter. If there was only one piece of advice we could give you, it would be to read Matthew 7:7-12. May God smile upon the two of you as He has smiled upon us, and when you come to a fork in the road of life, and you are not sure which way to turn-turn to the Lord and through His grace you will never go wrong.

All Our Love,
Mom and Dad

P.S. Thanks for being such great kids.

Stephen,

Remember that you will always be our little Brother. We're so proud of you. You are becoming the man that Dad always wanted you to be. As you look forward to the road ahead, remember these words...

"For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, says the Lord. Thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you a future and hope. Then you will call upon me and go and pray to me and I will listen to you and you will seek me and find me when you search for me with all your heart." Jeremiah 29: 11-13

Before you were born, we knew you were going to be someone special, whether you were a boy or girl (We really thought a boy). So many times you made us laugh and cry (climbing on the bathroom window, try and forget about the spoon,) But through it all, you have made us so very proud! We wouldn't have traded you for anything.

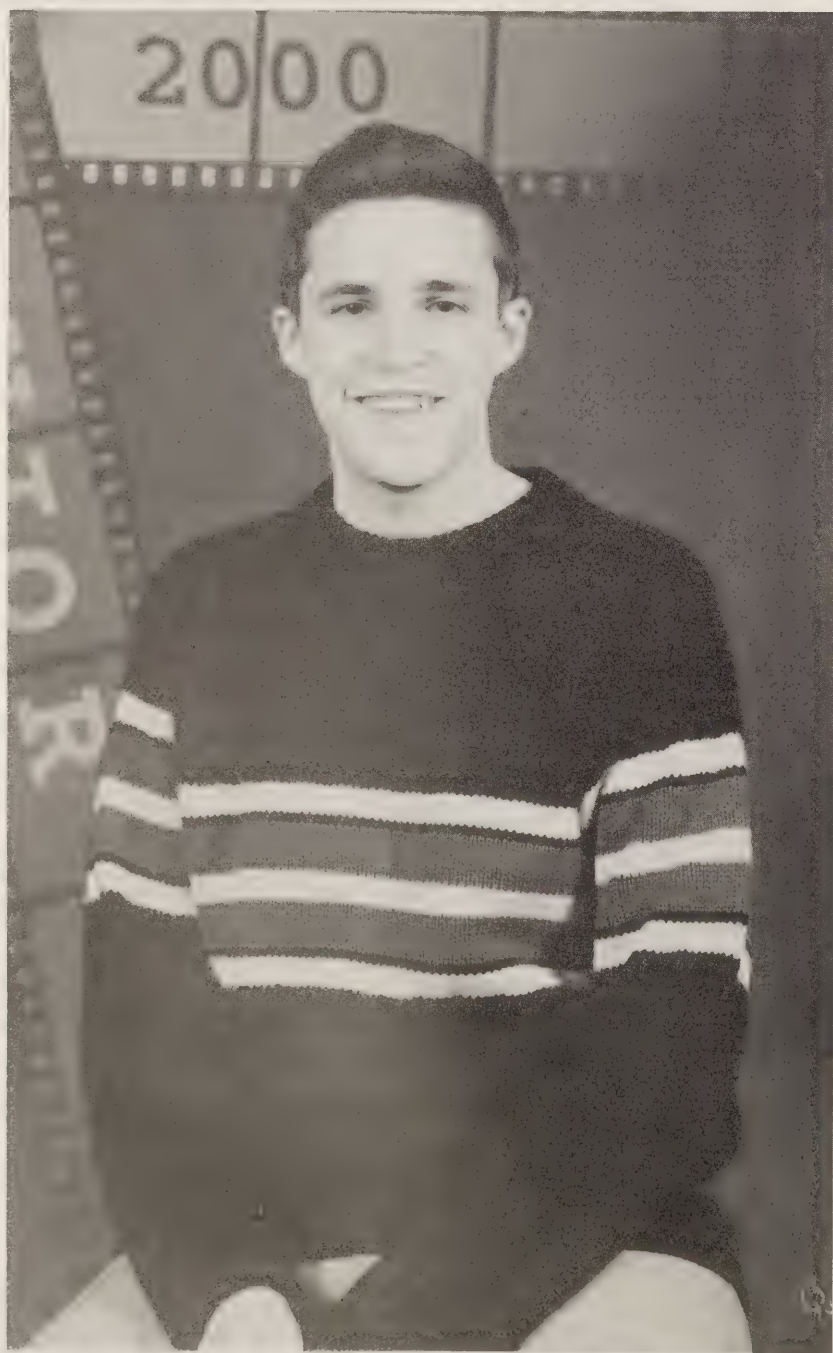

Thank you for just being you,
Love you more,
Mom and Dad

One Step To The End

Many years ago we started on a path to individualism, responsibility, freedom, and success, but now some of us have come to another stepping stone in our lives. Throughout our travel, though, we endured new experiences, made new friends, and, most importantly, we have grown as people, and now we must make a choice. Some of us may take one giant leap to a large rock and others of us may skip from one small stone to another before we make our way to the large rock. But either path that is taken will hold new experiences. Finally at the end of our journey we will have met our goals: to be individuals, to be responsible, to be free, and, thus, we will have succeeded.

The boy made his decision to jump onto a stone that would carry him to the other side of the bank. As his feet landed on the stone he slipped and fell into the water. Holding onto the stone, he floated in the water feeling as though there was no need to go on. Suddenly he heard a familiar voice on the other side of the bank, and as he looked over his shoulder, he saw his best friend waving him on. With all the energy he could muster, the boy pulled himself up, and with the help of his friend, he made his way to the other side of the bank. Through the boy's travel, he learned never to give up and that, no matter what the future looked like, there would always be a way to succeed.
